REMOVAL OF HARRISON, HAMILTON EXPECTED TODAY; TALMADGE COHORTS CLOSELY GUARD OUSTER PLANS

JONES FORECASTS EARLY AGREEMENT ON FARM MEASURE

House Expected To Select Conferees Today To Attempt To Reach an Accord on Controverted Agricultural Program.

CROPPERS CENTER OF FRESH DISPUTE

Tarver Provision Stirs Sharp Criticism By Smith, With Promise He Will Oppose Proposal.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Satisfactory agreement on the new farm bill in the "third house" of congress—the conference room—was w:s forecast today by Chairman Jones, democrat, Texas, of the house agriculture committee.

The Texan, predicting full study of house amendment would modify initial senate opposition, said, "I don't think we will have any great difficulty."

Jones is expected to head conferees on the $500,0000,000 soil conservation subsidy legislation. The house will appoint them tomorrow, then take up the 1936-38 agriculture appropriation bill.

Although details of the Department of Agriculture money bill will not be made public until tomorrow, committee members said the total would be far beneath budget estimates and would not include $1,000,000 asked to carry on a tree-planting "shelterbelt" program.

Opposition by Smith.

Chairman Smith, democrat, South Carolina, of the senate agriculture committee, who heads farm bill conferees appointed by that branch yesterday, has served notice he would oppose a house amendment specifying that consideration be given share-croppers and tenant farmers in apportioning subsidies.

(Both senate and house have passed similar bills amending the 1935 soil erosion act to permit payment of not more than $500,000,000 a year in federal subsidies to farmers directly or through a federal-state co-operative plan for "economic use" of land normally devoted to commercial crops. The senate, which acted first, disagreed to house amendments, which means committees representing both branches will seek adjustment of the differences in conference.)

The method for apportioning funds to states under the so-called "permanent" co-operative program, which will become effective after two years, is one of the major differences between the two branches.

Tarver Provision.

Most public discussion, however, has centered around the share-cropper provision sponsored by Representative Tarver, democrat, Georgia, and an amendment by Representative McCormack, democrat, Massachusetts, aiming at raising farm income to pre-war levels but specifying farm production must be maintained at the 1920-1929 level of consumer demand.

An amendment by Senator Wagner, democrat, New York, intended to provide protection for consumers similar to that given by the McCormack provision, was turned down in the senate.

Commenting on Smith's complaint the Tarver amendment was unfair "because the tenant and the share-cropper get all now," Jones said the section "merely provides that the secretary (of agriculture) shall consider the interests of the tenant in mapping out any program."

He insisted it was not a mandatory direction.

"I think it mandatory on the secretary to consider these producers," Tarver countered, "and deal with them the same extent that there has been

Ex-Governor Albert C. Ritchie, Dies Suddenly of Heart Attack

ALBERT C. RITCHIE.

BALTIMORE, Feb. 24 (Monday)—(AP)—Former Governor Albert C. Ritchie, a nationally known figure in the democratic party, died suddenly at his apartment here early today. He was 59 years old.

Ritchie was one of his generation's foremost champions of states' rights.

The four-times governor of Maryland first prominently advocated this principle as a foe of prohibition. His stand against the 18th amendment in its early years made him a national figure and by 1922 his political stature was such that he was able to bid for the democratic presidential nomination.

Later Ritchie took a conspicuous place in national affairs as a critic of Franklin D. Roosevelt's New Deal administration. He asserted the grand-scale spending and other expanded federal functions were engulfing local self-government and menacing bed-rock principles of the nation.

A dramatic incident projected him into prominence as a pioneer opponent tle short of political heresy in many of national prohibition. It occurred at a governors' conference President Harding called at the White House in 1922 to enlis' enforcement of the 18th amendment. A wet stand then was lit-

E. Francis Riggs, Police Chief of Island, Killed by Nationalist Youths.

SAN JUAN, Puerto Rico., Feb. 23. (AP)—E. Francis Riggs, insular chief of police and a former United States army colonel, was shot and killed today by two nationalists, both of whom were later kiled by police.

Two hours later, in another shooting, District Police Chief Francisco Velez Ortiz was killed at Utuado while attempting to quell a nationalist riot in a cafe.

(A dispatch from Ponce, Puerto Rico, said Velez Ortiz was not killed in the Utuado shooting but was seriously wounded. This dispatch stated one nationalist was killed, and other persons were wounded.)

An autopsy showed that Riggs was shot through the head, the right hand, the chest and the arm. The driver of his car, Policeman Juan Alvarez, was shot through the shoulder.

Governor Blanton Winship, after conferring with Attorney-General Fernandez Garcia, said a complete investigation of the shooting of the former American officer would be pushed vigorously.

Youths Admit Shooting.

Police said Elias Beauchamp and Erem Rosado, each under 21 years of age, admitted shooting Riggs.

Officers declared that while the two were under questioning at police headquarters, they reached for carbines, but police immediately opened fire, killing Beauchamp and fatally wounding Rosado, who died shortly afterward.

Prominent in U. S.

Riggs, a member of a prominent Washington and Maryland family, had been head of the island police force since late in 1933. He was recommended for the post by Senator Millard E. Tydings, democrat, Maryland, chairman of the senate territorial committee.

A Catholic, Riggs was returning from mass carrying a prayer book and rosary. He was riding in an automobile, unarmed, when he was shot.

Riggs was born in Washington, D. C., in 188 , was graduated from Yale University in 1909, entered the United States army in 1911, and retired in 1920. H commanded an artillery force during the World War.

After the war he served as military attache at Petrograd (now Leningrad), Russia, and headed a field

TOWNSEND PLAN IS FLAYED AGAIN

Liberty League Raps Pension Movement; To Start Immediate Probe.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Two new attacks were leveled at the Townsend plan today on the eve of the first meeting of a bipartisan congressional committee directed to investigate old age pension movements.

The American Liberty League said "no more cruel hoax ever was perpetrated upon a trusting people" than the proposal for a transactions tax to pay old people $200 a month, and added:

""he enthusiasm of the Townsendites for the plan speaks ill of the credulity of American citizens. The Townsend plan is a token of a state of public mind created by the New Deal's dazzling promises of the more abundant life."

A statement signed by 77 members of the economists national committee on monetary policy called the plan "an expression of the false theory that more money in circulation necessarily brings an improved economic condition and a higher standard of living."

Desires Immediate Action.

Chairman Bell, democrat, Missouri, of the house committee of four democrats and four republicans, designated to inquire into the financing and other phases of all old age pension movements, said he wanted to get his group organized "as quickly as possible."

The committee probably will meet tomorrow to determine how much money it will need and the procedure it will follow.

Representative McGroarty, democrat, California, who introduced Townsend legislation in the house, said the committee make-up was "entirely satisfactory" although he protested that Bell was "biased and prejudiced."

"Indefensible" Plan.

McGroarty was particularly pleased with the naming of Representatives Collins, republican, California, and Tolan, democrat, California, who, he said, were Townsend supporters. Representative Hoffman, republican, Michigan, another committeeman, is a sharp Townsend critic.

The statement of the 77 economists said the pension plan "is indefensible and, if enacted into law, it would work violently against the national welfare."

Along the same line, the Liberty League said "the unanimous verdict of economists and fiscal experts is that the plan is based upon fallacious theories, that it would not work and that if the attempt were made to put

RUSSIANS SOUND WARNING OF WAR IN FAR EAST ARENA

Soviets Expected To Aid Mongolia If Buffer State Territory Is Invaded by Nippon Troops.

MOSCOW, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Soviet newspapers declared today the far-eastern situation is creating the danger of "another world war."

This the government said officially is causing "serious concern."

Tamekichi Ota, Japanese ambassador consulted Tokyo by wire in regard to the soviet's suggestion that steps be taken immediately to put a halt to frequent clashes on the border between Manchoukuo and outer Mongolia.

Foreign observers were interested in the statement to Ota by B. S. Stomoniakoff, vice commissar for foreign affairs, that the soviet's relation with Outer Mongolia have been "unalterably friendly." They took it as a strong hint that the Kremlin will not tolerate aggression against the buffer state and thus, in a sense, an answer to the question in the minds of many as to whether the soviets would intervene in case Mongolia is invaded.

Today's declarations were in connection with the 18th anniversary of the organization of the red army, now a force of 1,300,000 men, which newspapers said is the soviet union's answer to "threats of war by Japan and Germany."

"Greater Germany."

The government's English language newspaper, Moscow Daily News, declared plans of nazi leaders call for "greater Germany" to include the soviet Ukraine, while Japanese militarists "dream of cutting off the soviet far east and the trans-Baikal region."

"The warlike gestures of these two countries are a threat not only to the soviet union but to the peace of the world," said the Daily News.

The German plan, the paper maintained, is for simultaneous action with Japan against the soviet union and an attack on France by an invasion of Holland and Belgium.

"Repeated provocations on the soviet-Manchoukuoan and the Manchoukuoan-Mongolian borders," it added,

MUSSOLINI PLANS TO HIKE AIR FORCE

1,500 New War Planes Expected To Be Added to Italian Fleet in 1936.

ROME, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Premier Benito Mussolini plans to add at least 1,500 new war planes to Italy's air fleet before the end of the year, aviation experts said tonight. Most of them will be high-speed bombers.

These machines, added to some 900 planes built last year and to those already in service, will bring Italy's military air force to around 5,500 machines by next December, it was estimated.

Many of the ships will be the new "S1" type bombers, which, Italian pilots say, can attain speeds between 217 and 248 miles an hour carrying three tons of bombs. Their cruising radius is about 1,860 miles.

Some of these bombers are in service in Eritrea and if Mussolini gave the orde , they could take off either at Massawa or Asmara, and easily bomb Addis Ababa. Some military observers believe this will be done before the rainy season starts, if the Italian high command thinks demoralization of the Ethiopian capital will hasten defeat of the Ethiopian forces without doing too much damage to the European political situation.

Airplane Factories Work.

According to air experts, Italy's airplane factories, scattered in all parts of the country, are working day and night manufacturing new planes at the rate of about five a day. As fast

ROOSEVELT TERMS 'NEIGHBOR' IDEA VITAL HOME NEED

President, Speaking From Hyde Park, Urges Policy's Adoption in Community Relationships.

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Feb. 23.—(AP) President Roosevelt from his home here tonight suggested to the nation that "the good neighbor idea—as we are trying to practice it in international relationship—needs to be put into practice in our community relationships."

Mr. Roosevelt spoke over the radio from the study room of the home on the banks of the Hudson river, where he arrived early today after visits to Temple and Harvard Universities.

"I like to think of our country," he said, "as one home in which the interests of each member are bound up with the happiness of all. We ought to know by now that the welfare of your family or mine cannot be bought at the sacrifice of our neighbor's family; that our well-being depends, in the long run, upon the well-being of our neighbors.

"The good neighbor idea—as we are trying to practice it in international relationship, needs to be put into practice in our community relationships.

"When it is we may discover that the road to understanding and fellowship is also the road to spiritual awakening. At our neighbor's fireside we may find new fuel for the fires of faith at our own heartsides."

The address was delivered over the radio on the occasion of Observance Day of the National Conference of Jews and Christians. Charles G. Dawes, former vice president, introduced the President from his home in Chicago.

The President asserted that "the chief religious issue is not between our various beliefs.

"It is between belief and unbelief. It is not your specific faith or mine that is being called into question—but all faith.

"Religion in wide areas of the earth is being confronted with irreligion; our faiths are being challenged. It is

DECATUR YOUTH KILLED IN CRASH

Eugene Barnes Is Crushed When Auto Overturns Near Watkinsville

Eugene Barnes, 21, son of Mrs. L. J. Gray, of 124 Glendale avenue, of Decatur, a student at the University of Georgia, was killed and four other persons were seriously injured in an automobile accident on the Athens-Watkinsville highway last night.

Barnes, who was driving, University officials said in Athens, died in an Athens hospital several hours after he was crushed when the automobile whirled from the highway one mile out of Watkinsville and overturned several times.

The officials said a report of the accident declared the youth was blinded by lights of an oncoming vehicle.

Others injured were listed as Miss Louise McAlister, of Piedmont, S. C., visiting in Athens; Mack Tucker, Sandersville; A. B. Reynolds, Cairo, and G. H. Roberts, the latter three university students.

Miss McAlister's injury was reported as a broken collarbone, Tucker had a broken ankle, while Reynolds and Roberts were severely bruised and lacerated.

The party was returning to Athens from Madison, where they had gone to take a student returning to G. S. C. W., at Milledgeville, a university official said.

Barnes was well known among the Rise in Temperatures Increases Threat of Floods in Middle West

CHICAGO, Feb. 23.—(AP)—A sharp rise in temperatures increased flood dangers in the middle west today.

In much of the territory drained by the Ohio, Mississippi and Missouri rivers and their tributaries, the mercury rose above the freezing level. Thaws ensued. The winter's record snows melted under temperatures ranging up to more than 50 degrees above zero.

C. A. Donnel, federal forecaster at Chicago, predicted even milder weather. He pointed out that no general alarm need be felt unless warm rains fall although abnormally moderate weather might dislodge some ice gorges threatening a number of towns.

Twenty-five hundred families, warned to "prepare for the worst," were urged to evacuate lowlands along the Ohio. A break in the huge ice jam in that area was regarded as imminent. Red Cross workers were mobilized to hasten abandonment of communities between Newburgh, Ind., and Uniontown, Ky.

The Red Cross drew emergency plans. United States coast guard units were ordered to stand by for possible aid. Forty motor surf boats in the Chicago division and nine in the Cleveland district were available for relief work.

Blasting of a four-foot ice sheath was considered as the mayors of towns in the Fox river valley of Illinois conferred at Aurora.

Mayor Conrad Bjorseth, of Aurora, said a sudden thaw might create ice

G. O. P. Leaders Believed Ready To Enter Landon in Ohio Primary

Governor, Leading Kansas Presidential Preference Poll, Expected To Be Placed on Ballot To Oppose Senator Borah.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Organized republican efforts to bring Governor Alf M. Landon, of Kansas, into the Ohio presidential primary in opposition to Senator William E. Borah were suspected by some political observers tonight in view of week-end political developments.

But current also were reports that only one candidate would challenge Borah in Ohio and that the lone challenger probably would be Frank Knox, of Chicago. Borah and Knox already have entered against each other in the Illinois primary.

Chief development pointing to Landon was the announcement in Columbus, Ohio, that the Governor was leading in a state-wide presidential preference poll conducted by the republican state executive committee. Chairman Ed Schorr made the announcement, without details.

Schorr and other Ohio leaders originally planned a favorite son or uninstructed delegation to the republican national convention, Borah sought to upset that strategy when he entered in Ohio with momentum believed by his backers to be sufficient to defeat any favorite son the regular organization could put up.

Borah to Speak March 19.

Borah will open his Ohio campaign with a speech at Youngstown on March 19. Carl G. Bachman, chairman of the national Borah-for-president committee, said arrangements had been made for a radio hookup to carry the senator's speech throughout Ohio and adjoining states.

COUGHLIN HURLS LIE AT O'CONNOR

Detroit Radio Priest Renews Attack on Opponent of Frazier-Lemke Bill.

DETROIT, Feb. 23.—(UP)—The Rev. Father Charles E. Coughlin renewed his controversy with Representative John J. O'Connor today by hurling the lie at the New York congressman who threatened to "kick" him from the capitol to the White House.

Reiterating his charge that O'Connor, whom he called "Friend John," sought to defeat the inflationary Frazier-Lemke farm mortgage bill, the radio priest, in his weekly sermon, read two telegrams which, he said, proved O'Connor used his influence against the bill.

The charge was Coughlin's answer to O'Connor's blast of last week in which the congressman, answering a sermon by Coughlin, berated Coughlin as "a priest in politics and a disgrace to the Roman Catholic church."

"The honorable gentleman's (O'Connor's) words," Coughlin said, "are these: 'I have never made any effort to induce any member of the house of representatives to withdraw his name from a petition seeking a vote on this measure.'

Here Is Answer.

"Here is the answer which I shall read to you from a telegram addressed to me by one of Mr. O'Connor's colleagues:

"'I was persuaded to remove my name from the Frazier-Lemke petition by Congressman John J. O'Connor, chairman of the rules committee. He said I was embarrassing the President by supporting this petition.'"

The telegram, Coughlin said, was from Representative Theodore L. Moritz, Pennsylvania democrat.

"Will you," he asked, "permit the representatives of my servant girls, my laborers and my farmers to meet your talent in open debate on the floor of congress and to kill or make live the Frazier-Lemke bill, which is the only bill that can save the homes of 32,000,000 people? Are you sportsman enough, are you American enough to accept that challenge?

"I think you are, John."

Pleading for Poor.

"My dear John, is it politicsto plead for the poor? . . . In fear and trembling, I ask you, John, is it politics to attempt, even at an infinite distance, to follow in the footsteps of Him who, when reason and prayers failed, drove the money changers from the temple by physical force?

"John, if these things be politics, I humbly submit that I am a politician."

He referred the congressman to the encyclicals of Pope Pius and to the pronouncements of Bishop Michael J. Gallagher, of whose diocese Coughlin is a member, for his authority to participate in politics.

"Friend John," Coughlin said, "I appreciate that time and circumstances have played you false. You have not had the occasion or opportunity to read these."

Emphasizing that the National Union for Social Justice would continue its efforts to "drive the money changers from the temple," Coughlin promised O'Connor that the names of both "signers and welshers" on the Frazier-Lemke bill petition would be published in the projected union magazine, "Social Justice," in its first issue.

He charged by insinuation that the "death" of the Frazier-Lemke bill had been effected by O'Connor as the instrumentality of the White House.

"Last Sunday," he added, "I left the Frazier-Lemke corpse upon the doorsteps of the White House, bear-

Sinclair Announces As 'Epic' Candidate

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Upton Sinclair, author-politico and founder of the "Epic" democratic movement, which swept him into nomination for governor two years ago, tonight announced he would be a candidate for president on the Epic slate.

The announcement was interpreted to mean that his candidacy would be "nominal," for the purpose of permitting California Epics to name their own slate of delegates to the national convention.

BRUNO TO DIRECT BATTLE FOR LIFE

Prisoner Will Map Strategy To Be Employed by Counsel for Defense.

TRENTON, N. J., Feb. 23.—(UP) Bruno Richard Hauptmann took charge of the fight to save his own life tonight and will direct all strategy, between now and the date set for his execution, from Cell No. 9 of the death house.

C. Lloyd Fisher and Frederick A. Pope will remain as his lawyers, but will consult him on every legal move. Hauptmann is unschooled in the law, but he knows every detail of the trial at Flemington and has obtained information as to his exact legal status.

"Hauptmann is smart," Fisher said. "He knows as much about this case as anybody, and is informed about everything that is going on."

The United Press learned that not more than three days ago a certain move in olving Dr. John Condon was suggested to Hauptmann.

"Don't do that right now," he said. "I have something else in mind."

May Question Hockmuth.

What he had in mind was the questioning of Millard Whited and Amandus Hockmuth, who testified against him at his Flemington trial on charges of murdering the Lindbergh baby. Hauptman is particularly anxious to have Hockmuth re-examined and it is probable that this will be the next move in the case.

At the trial when Hochmuth identified him as the man who drove an automobile near the Lindbergh home on the day of the kidnaping, Hauptman shook his head and said in German: "The old man is carzy."

As his death date draws near, Hauptmann becomes more and more convinced that his main chance lies in upsetting Hochmuth's testimony by trying to prove the 88-year-old man's eyes were too feeble to identify anyone.

The direction of a case from a cell in a death house is not so difficult as it sounds. Hauptmann is allowed to see his lawyers as often as he pleases and make suggestions to them. In addition, he can send notes to Principal Keeper Mark O. Kimberling. Every request that comes from Hauptmann, however, must be in writing, so the warden will have a record of it.

"Outlook Is Dark."

Fisher, admitting the "outlook is dark" is ready to comply with every reasonable suggestion Hauptmann makes.

From an associate of Samuel Leibo-

OFFICIALS REVEAL THEY WILL RESIST EJECTION ORDERS

Comptroller, Treasurer To Be at Offices This Morning; Martial Law May Be Necessary To Accomplish Removal.

BOYKIN TO PROBE FUND WITHHOLDING

State Workers, Records To Be Summoned; Governor Denies Cash Deposit Offer for New Bond.

Governor Talmadge is expected to accomplish his projected ouster of Comptroller General William B. Harrison and State Ttreasurer George B. Hamilton today, by a means which the Governor and his associates were closely guarding last night.

Which of the many laws cited as a possible means of removal will be used or whether the national guard will be pressed into service was a matter o conjecture. One thing appeared certain and that was that Talmadge would have to use more than an executive order to oust the two officials as both have made known their determination to stay on the job until forcibly ejected which is another way of saying that it will take a gun or a bayonet to do the job.

The comptroller and treasurer, both of whom say they expect to be ousted, said yesterday they would be in their offices at the usual time this morning.

Talmadge "Resting."

The Governor, at the mansion, said he had no comment on the situation, adding: "This is the Sabbath. I am resting."

Observers, speculating on the reasons for the delay in the Governor taking action generally have centered on the belief that inability to obtain quickly a $200,000 surety bond for the man he wants to succeed Hamilton is the cause.

Governor Talmadge denied The Constitution report that he had offered to put up $250,000 cash with surety companies and give them highway insurance business which would net $35,000 premiums, but the companies turned down the proffer.

"I haven't heard a thing about it," the Governor said Saturday night.

Whether or not the $200,000 bond had been secured yesterday could not be definitely learned.

Action Expected Today.

However, observers thought everything would be ready for the expected removal of the officials today.

The two constitutional officers have blocked Talmadge's efforts to withdraw 1936 revenue from the state treasury in his determined stand to run the state government without an appropriations bill this year.

Several state departments virtually have exhausted what little money they were able to get from the Governor's emergency fund, which now is depleted.

These departments had no carryover from 1935. Others, more fortunate, also are near the end of their available resources. This particularly applies to the various charity institutions.

After proclaiming his taking over of the financial affairs of state, which he did actually the first of the year, the Governor a few days ago ordered Hamilton and Harrison to "set up the books" by crediting all a enties

Cobb Says: Convicts Having Good Time

By IRVIN S. COBB.

(Copyright, 1936, by North American Newspaper Alliance, Inc.)

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., Feb. 23.—Things certainly are lovely for the boys in the big stone bide-awee homes, is it not so?

At San Quentin here in California, chosen groups turning out counterfeit money and never having to worry about getting in jail, since they are already in. And a nice jolly strike on at Alcatraz. And in my old home state, the inmates just seeming to come and go at will, as it were.

But in Illinois is where the chaps enjoy all the benefits of congenial society without the bother of paying dues. It must be grand, serving as a member of the house committee of the Joliet Indoor Country Club, what with crap games and poker parties and liquor made right there on the premises and shots in the arm at the low rate of $1 per shot.

The day is at hand when "prison break" in the headlines won't mean that some of the fellows on the inside are trying to get out but that some of the fellows on the outside are trying to get in: as who could blame them?

E. A. NEARY, 70, DIES AT HOME IN WAYCROSS

E. A. Neary, former resident of Atlanta and for 30 years associated with the Continental Gin Company, of Birmingham, died yesterday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. J. Mac Jennings, at Waycross, Ga. He was 70 years old and had been in declining health for several years.

Mr. Neary was a native of Greene county and lived in Atlanta for several years.

He is survived by a son, W. E. Neary, of Atlanta; two daughters, Mrs Jennings and Mrs. Shaler Wallace, of Atlanta, and a brother, W. R. Neary, of Albany.

LONG BEACH, Cal., Feb. 23.—(AP) The body of Mrs. Ethel Palm, 40, a divorcee, was found today in her apartment with a silk undergarment knotted about her neck. Detectives reported the case to the coroner's office as a possible suicide, but said their investigation was not closed.

gorges that would threaten bridges and spill flood waters over the land.

Prospect and Liberty islands in California's Sacramento river were inundated when levees collapsed. Officials estimated damage at several hundred thousand dollars.

Precautions were taken in a half dozen midwestern states.

The mercury rose to 40 at Chicago, the highest in 10 days. Other readings included: Denver, 54; Cheyenne, 48; Rapid City, S. D., 38; Davenport, Iowa, 34. The upward trend continued.

Navigation conditions in Lake Michigan were described as "the worst in many years" because of heavy fields of slush and ice.

PACIFIC DEATH TOLL MOUNTS PAST TEN

SAN FRANCISCO, Feb. 23.—(AP) Emergency crews battled flood and snow in Pacific states today as the storm death toll for two days mounted past 10.

Drifts and avalanches blocked Sierra and Cascade mountain highways.

Rampaging streams flooded thousands of acres in California's valleys. Homes and cultivated areas near Nampa, Idaho, were abandoned as Indian creek went out of its banks for the first time in 10 years.

Rescuers recovered three bodies from an avalanche which choked Snoqualmie Pass in the Cascades, 65 miles west of Seattle, and trapped scores of motorists.

Four persons drowned, one died from exposure and another was killed in an automobile accident attributed to the storm in California.

One man was crushed to death by a falling tree in Oregon. Another was killed by an automobile while working with a road clearing crew.

Hundreds of winter sports enthusiasts were marooned at homes and resorts on the shores of Lake Tahoe, in the high Sierra, by an overnight blizzard. Four feet of new snow brought the winter pack to six feet.

Water poured into sections of Merced, Cal., from Bear creek.

DUST STORMS SWEEP 4 MIDWEST STATES

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Feb. 23.—(UP)—Blinding dust storms enveloped parts of four plains states tonight.

Churned by heavy southwest winds, the uneasy silt of Oklahoma and the Texas Panhandle settled so thickly over many section that visibility was eliminated or restricted.

Pueblo, Col., reported no visibility. Amarillo, Texas and several communities in western Kansas reported vision of only a few feet.

2,500 INDIANA HOMES THREATENED BY FLOOD.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Feb. 23.—(AP)—A general breakup of the entire 70-mile long ice gorge in the Ohio river started tonight and alleviated fears of serious damage to more than 2,500 homes in the lowlands.

As the great masses of ice began sliding through the narrows at Uniontown, Ky., keystone of the gorge, coast guardsmen intensified a search for a government navigation light tender and his wife, whose houseboat has disappeared.

Missing were George Pete and his wife. Their houseboat, which had been marooned near the mouth of Green river, could not be found today. Coast guardsmen went to the rescue of two other families marooned by the ice.

Red Cross officials, headed by Charles W. Carr, of Washington, worked throughout the day moving approximately 500 families from their homes for fear flood waters, dammed up by the ice, might send the mass crashing through the lowlands.

SPORTS FOLLOWERS RELEASED FROM SNOW.

TRUCKEE, Cal., Feb. 23.—(UP) Highway crews working against a blizzard succeeded in opening the Donner Summit road tonight, releasing 750 California winter sports enthusiasts marooned in the Truckee and Lake Tahoe areas.

The average amount of soil removed from clothes by the dry cleaning process is approximately 5 per cent of the weight of the garment.

Text of Address Made by Roosevelt

HYDE PARK, N. Y., Feb. 23.—(AP) The text of President Roosevelt's address follows:

I am happy to speak to you from my own home on the evening of a Sabbath day which has been observed in so many of your home communities as Brotherhood Day. The National Conference of Jews and Christians has set aside a day on which we can meet, not primarily as Protestants or Catholics or Jews, but as believing Americans; a day on which we can dedicate ourselves not to the things which divide but to the things which unite us. I hope that we have begun to see how many and how important are the things on which we are united. Now, of all times, we require that kind of thinking.

There are honest differences of religious belief among the citizens of your town as there are among the citizens of mine. It is a part of the spirit of Brotherhood Day, as it is a part of our American heritage to respect those differences. And it is well for us to remember that this America of ours is the product of no single race or creed or class. Men and women—your fathers and mine—came here from the far corners of the earth with beliefs that widely varied. And yet, each in his own way, laid his own special gift upon our national altar to enrich our national life. From the gift that each has given, all have gained.

UNITY IS URGED BY ROOSEVELT.

This is no time to make capital out of religious disagreement, however honest. It is a time, rather, to make capital out of religious understanding. We who have faith cannot afford to fall out among ourselves. The very state of the world is a summons to us to stand together. For as I see it, the chief religious issue is not between our various beliefs. It is between belief and unbelief. It is not your specific faith or mine that is being called into question—but all faith. Religion in wide areas of the earth is being confronted with irreligion; our faiths are being challenged. It is because of that threat that you and I must reach across the lines between our creeds, clasp hands, and make common case.

To do that will do credit to the best of our religious tradition. It will do credit, also, to the best in our American tradition. The spiritual resources of our forbears have brought us a long way toward the goal which was set before the nation at its founding as a nation.

SAME QUALITIES ARE REQUIRED.

Yet I do not look upon these United States as a finished product. We are still in the making. The vision of the early days still requires the same qualities of faith in God and man for its fulfillment.

No greater thing could come to our land today than a revival of the spirit of religion—a revival that would sweep through the homes of the nation and stir the hearts of men and women of all faiths to a reassertion of their belief in God and their dedication to His will for themselves and for their world. I doubt if there is any problem—social, political or economic—that would not melt away before the fire of such a spiritual awakening.

I know of no better way to kindle such a fire than through the fellowship that an occasion like this makes possible. For Brotherhood Day, after all is an experiment in understanding; a venture in neighborliness.

WELFARE OF HOME STRESSED IN TALK.

I like to think of our country as one home in which the interests of each member are bound up with the happiness of all. We ought to know, by now, that the welfare of your family or mine cannot be bought at the sacrifice of our neighbors' family; that our well being depends, in the long run, upon the well being of our neighbors. The good neighbor idea—as we are trying to practice it in international relationships—needs to be put into practice in our community relationships. When it is we may discover that the road to understanding and fellowship is also the road to spiritual awakening. At our neighbors' fireside we may find new fuel for the fires of faith at our own hearthside.

It would be a fitting thing for an organization such as the National Conference of Jews and Christians to undertake this kind of a project in neighborliness. I should like to see asosciations of good neighbors in every town and city and in every rural community in our land. Such associations of sincere citizens like-minded as to the underlying principles and ideals would reach across the lines of creed or of economic status. It would bring together men and women of all stations to share their problems and their hopes and to discover ways of mutual and neighborly helpfulness. Here perhaps is a way to pool our spiritual resources; to find common ground on which all of us of all faiths can stand; and thence to move forward as men and women concerned for the things of the spirit.

because of that threat that you and I must reach across the lines between our creeds, clasp hands, and make common cause."

Arriving here at 8:30 this morning, Mr. Roosevelt observed to neighbors on the banks of the ice frozen Hudson river that "I thought you kept the Hudson river open all year to Albany."

He motored directly from the station to the family residence, the motor going over the snow-covered road leading up the hill with a few of the neighbors out despite the cold. It was Sunday morning.

15-YEAR-OLD AVIATOR HURT AT CARTERSVILLE

Jack DuPree, 15-year-old aviator, who learned to fly at Candler airport, was slightly injured late yesterday afternoon when the plane he was piloting crashed into a ditch at the Cartersville airport.

DuPree formerly lived on the Marietta highway, near Smyrna, where his father operated a tourist camp. He is well known among pilots and ground crews at Candler airport.

WASHINGTON OFFICIAL SHOCKED AT SLAYING

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Ernest H. Gruening, director of the division of island possessions, expressed shock tonight at the slaying of E. Francis Riggs, chief of police of Puerto Rico.

"Riggs was a very splendid officer," said Gruening. "His death will be a great loss to the islands."

LEHMAN SAYS SOLONS BLOCK N.Y. CRIME DRIVE

ALBANY, N. Y., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Governor Herbert H. Lehman, in a direct appeal to citizens of New York state, charged tonight that lawyer legislators are warring against his anti-crime program although "present laws greatly favor the criminal."

Over a state-wide radio hook-up, he named three legislators—Horace A. Stone, and James R. Robinson, republicans, and John A. Bryne, Tammany democrat. These men, he said, were active in the battle to "strangle and defeat as much of this program as they dared." All are lawyers.

History Professor Safe.

SEATTLE, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Dr. George Kenneth Boyce, University of Washington history instructor who disappeared two weeks ago, is alive and safe, said a letter received here today. The letter, sent Professor Edward McMahon by Miss Alene Abaecherli, of Cincinnati, Dr. Boyce's fiancee, gave no indication of his recent whereabouts. Dr. Boyce last was seen at the university February 8.

1936 MARCH 1936 / 1936 FEBRUARY 1936

You're better prepared for winter—if your general resistance is good!

Last winter did you have the experience of feeling fine until the very end of the season, and then coming down with some winter ill?

This happens to many people. They manage to get along for a few months on the reserve they stored up during the summer when they led a healthful, outdoor life. But they do nothing to replenish that reserve. The result is that by the end of winter, their general resistance is low.

Don't take this chance yourself! Prepare for the last few weeks of winter. Start building good general resistance.

One of the easiest, pleasantest aids is Adex. Each Adex capsule furnishes 6,600 units of the important factor which helps to build up general resistance, Vitamin A. In every capsule, you also get extra Vitamin D—1,320 units—to help make up for lack of sunshine at this season.

Squibb obtains the vitamins from healthful, natural sources—fish liver oils known for their high vitamin content.

ATTACK ON O'CONNOR RENEWED BY COUGHLIN

ing in its breast the tell-tale stiletto of the house rules committee. Today I observe that the corpse left there is still unburied and stinks in the nostrils of the American public."

The issue at stake, Coughlin said, is "neither the distinguished Representative O'Connor nor the priest-out-of-the-pulpit, Father Coughlin."

"The issue concerns itself directly to the impossibility of having debated on the floor of the house . . . a great farm relief bill.

" believe that it smacks of toryism and bourbonism and of fascist dictatorship to strangulate any bill of national importance for the sake of placing a party and its policies above the nation and its prosperity."

Prayer Urged.

Recalling O'Connor's telegraphed charge that "you are a disgrace to my church," Coughlin replied:

"You boast of being a Catholic. John, get down on your knees and beg God to make you a good one—one who is able to give a reason for the faith that is in Him; one who is willing to follow the great commandment . . . to love your neighbor as yourself . . ."

Coughlin repeated that he did not resent O'Connor's personal remarks, "I t," he said, "I do resent your charge that I lack sportsmanship."

"On Tuesday," he continued, "this gentleman made apology for his remarks about me (the kicking episode) in the house of representatives. I am not replying to him in my name; rather I make the reply in the name of the National Union for Social Justice."

The priest talked without his usual oratorical thunder. He spoke quietly, but feelingly. Once he brought in the names of General Hugh Johnson and the Detroit Free Press, the newspaper he assailed during the 1933 Detroit banking holiday.

"Some unkind and ghoulish friend," he said, "visited these two sources and informed you I am not an American citizen; that I was a speculator for my own profit on the silver exchange.

"In fact," he concluded, "on the authority of these once influential corpses, it was rumored that I was not a priest in proper standing; yea, that a priest's place was in the pulpit."

SPRINGLIKE WEATHER FORECAST FOR TODAY

Atlantans have another pleasant day in store for them today, it was forecast last night by meteorologists of the airport weather bureau. The temperatures are expected to climb even higher than those of yesterday to give the city its first taste of early spring.

The general forecast for the day is mostly fair with high clouds. No rain is expected immediately, the weather map revealing fair weather from the Mississippi river eastward and from the Great Lakes southward.

The mercury is scheduled to begin a rise from a lowest point of 44 degrees early this morning. Today's low will be 14 degrees above the temperature early yesterday, when the mercury dropped to 30 degrees. Yesterday's maximum was 64 degrees.

EARTHQUAKE ROCKS CALIFORNIA CITIES

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—(AP)—An earthquake of moderate intensity shook Los Angeles and the foothill cities today. It caused no damage. Windows were rattled, chandeliers were set in motion and dishes clattered. The shock lasted only a few seconds starting at 2:24 p. m.

The shock was most pronounced in Montrose, situated in the Verdugo hills.

Tugging Efforts Delayed.

HAMILTON, Berumda, Feb. 23.—(AP)—A strong northwesterly gale frustrated two attempts today by the tug St. Blazey and the tender Castle Harbour to get the disabled Furness liner Nova Scotia in tow. The liner lay at anchor eight miles off St. George's, Bermuda, to which it was towed by the steamship Eastern Prince after it lost its rudder. The Nova Scotia, carrying 188 passengers, left St. Thomas, Virgin Islands, February 17, bound for New York.

BORAH'S SENATE SEAT IS SOUGHT BY M'KAIG

Presidential Campaign Will Begin in Ohio on 10th of March.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Conjecture whether Senator Borah, of Idaho, was "burning all bridges behind him" in his drive for the republican presidential nomination arose today out of announcement that a political ally was seeking his senatorial seat.

Ray McKaig, of Boise, Idaho, a national grange leader, independent republican and for many years a close friend of Borah, made the announcement shortly after a conference with the senator.

Borah himself declined to comment. Some of his friends, however, saw in the maneuver indication that he may abandon any claim to the senate seat he has held since 1907 even before the Cleveland convention next June decided his battle for the presidential nomination.

Word that Borah would "personally open his campaign in Ohio" on March 19 at Youngstown came during the day from Carl G. Bachmann, chairman of the national Borah for president committee. In a statement, Bachmann said:

Campaign Plans.

"The Ohio committee has arranged for the auditorium there with a radio hookup that will carry his speech into Ohio and adjoining states.

"I believe that Senator Borah will convince the voters of Ohio and every other state in the union that he is willing to discuss all the issues involved in his campaign and is in the contest for the nomination at Cleveland until the finish and nothing can stop him."

Today's announcement by McKaig was the second notice of intention to seek the Idaho republican senatorial nomination.

Ralph E. Whitten, several times a state senator, announced two weeks ago.

McKaig declared that if "political manipulators" turned down Borah at the national convention "there is no hope for my election."

Fess, Hilles Feared.

"If I get the nomination and Senator Borah is turned down for the (presidential) nomination by such political manipulators as Fess, of Ohio, and Hilles, of New York," McKaig said, "there is no hope for the republican party in the west and there is no hope for my election next fall."

Both references were to active figures in republican affairs, the first being former Senator Simeon D. Fess, of Ohio, and the latter Charles D. Hilles, national committeeman from New York.

McKaig has been closely associated with Borah in his three last campaigns. He went to Idaho from North Dakota in 1917 as a non-partisan league leader and subsequently headed the progressive party which in 1924 nominated Borah its candidate for the Idaho senate seat.

"The republican party needs a rebirth," he said, "why cannot the men that wrecked our party leave it alone. I wish Senator Fess had 'taken a walk' long before he was elected senator."

West For Borah.

After a three-month tour of western states, largely in Borah's interest, McKaig came to Washington about two weeks ago. He said he had conferred with farm leaders throughout the west and predicted "Borah would carry for the presidency nearly every one of those states. The farmer at heart is a true lover of the constitution."

"If I ever get into Borah's shoes," he added, "I'd rattle around like a dwarf but his policies would guide a greenhorn like me."

McKaig was born 51 years ago in Ligonier, Indiana, ranched for a time in North Dakota, then went to Idaho. There he is a member of the legislative committee of the grange and a deputy of the national grange.

He was one of the group which nominated Lynn J. Frazier for governor of North Dakota in 1916. Frazier was elected, and subsequently entered the senate.

a diminution of their production under the soil conservation program."

Benefits for Croppers.

Tarver said that presumably tenants and share-croppers would be paid cash benefits for diversion of land they customarily cultivated. The Georgian added that "any program that leaves out of consideration 50 per cent of the producers must necessarily be a failure."

The tenant-sharecropper fight is an old one on Capitol Hill. In drawing his amendment in language acceptable to Jones, Tarver told the house it would demonstrate clearly "the purpose and intent of congress" that these groups should "receive a fair share of the benefits that are to be paid."

The share-cropper and tenant till land, especially in the south, under an arrangement with landowners under which they divide crop receipts.

Smith said yesterday that "tenants are given their part of the crop with no strings on it, while the landowner has to pay taxes and the costs of production, housing, implements and repairs. It's not fair that he should give away what he gets for good land practices which make more money for his workers."

BRUNO WILL DIRECT LIFE FIGHT STRATEGY

witz, who withdrew from the case because Hauptmann refused to talk or name accomplices, came the statement that the prisoner already has had too much to say about how the defense should be conducted.

"If we had the case," this man said, "we would tell Hauptmann at the start that we were running it to suit ourselves, and that his interests would be better served by letting us outline all the strategy."

Hauptmann is eager to have another visit from Governor Harold G. Hoffman, because he believes he can convince the Governor he deserves a new trial.

It was said at the Governor's office tonight that there was no prospect of Hoffman visiting Hauptmann immediately, although no prediction was made about the future. It was reiterated that another reprieve was unlikely.

Auto Crashes Are More Numerous In Fair Weather, Survey Reveals

Adverse weather conditions are obvious traffic hazards, and yet most automobile crashes do not occur during periods of bad weather.

This fact is pointed out this morning by the Safety Council of The Constitution, sponsors of a safe driving-safe walking campaign in Atlanta and surrounding territory.

The Safety Council invites you to glance at some figures contained in tables on weather and road conditions, which throw additional light upon the question of speed and its relationship to the seriousness of automobile accidents.

Clear Day Crashes.

Clear days, with the sun shining, saw a total of 699,710 crashes in 1934. This total represents 84.6 per cent of all the crashes, and of that number, 28,600 were fatal accidents.

A total of 619,930 crashes occurred on dry surfaces, or 75 per cent of all the crashes in 1934, and in these smashups, 25,860 persons were killed.

Fog, rain, snow, wet, snowy and icy surfaces, easily seen as bad driving conditions, produced comparatively few automobile crashes.

The Safety Council stresses the fact that during bad weather traffic usually slows up. There, in short, is the answer.

This does not mean that vehicular traffic should be required to crawl along, but it reveals conclusively that a little less speed at all times would go a long way toward safeguarding life and limb.

Carefulness Pays.

Another word for less speed is carefulness. In bad weather, motorists are usually more alert to the obvious traffic dangers, which also has much to do with the small ratio of crashes during bad weather.

When clear days sound a call to the open highways, those days when motoring should be a pleasure, remember that carefulness pays dividends.

Let not the sun shine down on twisted, broken human bodies, impaled horribly on twisted, broken wreckage.

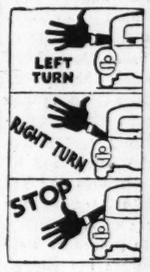
Driving with care means driving with common sense, with regard to the ordinary laws that govern motoring. Drive at a moderate rate of speed, and with due regard for consequences of hasty, thoughtless actions.

A minute saved may mean your life. Such risks are not worth taking, for eternity is a long, long time and the law of averages is constantly working against you.

Sign the Pledge.

Thousands of persons have already joined with the Safety Council in its fight against death and destruction.

Send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to the Safety Council and enlist in this war. You will receive stickers for your car and other material relative to safety.



Sign the safety pledge printed in this newspaper as part of its safety campaign, and follow the seven simple rules it outlines. Observing them will make you a safe, better driver.

Use the proper hand signals when you are at the wheel of your car. They will give not only you, but the other fellow, a chance, and may save your life as well as his.

These safety factors are the results of scientific study, and are based on immutable laws, backed up by figures which show what can and does happen to careless drivers.

Be careful! Drive carefully at all times!

REMOVAL OF OFFICIALS IS EXPECTED TODAY with 70 per cent of their normal annual appropriation of $10,500,000.

Revived Balances.

He ordered the payments by reviving unpaid balances of the preceding four years. These unpaid balances are what is left after the legislative figures are pared down to put spending within income, as required by law.

Harrison, in refusing to countersign a warrant for more than $100,000 for the eleemosynary institutions, contended that the unpaid balances were "annulled" by the same act requiring the Governor to cut them to fit revenue.

Hamilton then made public a letter to Harrison, in which the treasurer backed up the comptroller and said if such warrants were presented to him he would refuse to pay them.

The law requires the counter-signature of the comptroller before the treasurer can honor the Governor's warrants.

Hamilton made the first move striking at the "dictatorship" when he wrote several state departments calling their attention to a law requiring all fees to be paid into the treasury.

Confers With Boykin.

Waiting the ten days required by law after sending his request, Hamilton asked Solicitor-General John A. Boykin, of Fulton superior court, to look into the taking of legal action against two of those receiving his letter.

He cited Commissioner of Agriculture Tom Linder, close personal and political ally of the Governor, and Charles E. Stewart, state naval stores inspector, and also a Talmadge appointee, as not having remitted fees to him.

Boykin conferred with Hamilton Saturday and said yesterday that he would begin his investigation today. Boykin could not say what line his probe would follow until he had gone more thoroughly into the matter.

However, it was indicated Boykin intended to summon several state employes and probably their records.

Officials Backed.

Hamilton and Harrison, at their homes, said they had a busy day answering the telephone and receiving telegraphic messages and telephone calls from persons throughout the state backing them.

They are going to their offices at the usual time, 9 o'clock, this morning.

Both have said they plan to resist ouster proceedings. Hamilton said he wouldn't get out unless it was at "the point of a bayonet."

Several adherents of the Governor's organization said that despite Hamilton's reference to "bayonet" they did not believe it would be necessary to use the national guard to remove either of them.

One of these adherents said he didn't think Harrison or Hamilton would resist physically.

However, there were others of an opposite opinion.

TWO PERSONS KILLED IN MINE EXPLOSION

JEFFERSON CITY, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Two miners, Link Carter, 33, and Howard Hale, 25, were blown to bits today by a premature blast at the Universal Zinc Company mine.

Company officials said the men had been "firing" alone in the mine. When they did not appear at the mouth of the mine a crew was sent to look for them. They found the mangled bodies.

PSYCHIATRISTS HEAR ATLANTA PHYSICIAN

Dr. N. M. Owensby Tells Group Mental Disorders Are Increasing.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Feb. 23.—(UP)—Mental disorders are increasing because life today is a battle of wits, whereas in the days of our forefathers it was a battle of brawn, Dr. Newdigate M. Owensby, Atlanta psychiatrist, told a meeting of the Southern Psychiatric Association today.

"Many of us are overtaxing our brains in our battles to outwit the other fellow, and therefore get out of line."

Dr. Owensby believes no mental disease is inherited, that only the germs which cause disease are inherited "and these germs only infinitesmally attack the brain."

"A child," he said, "apes much more than a monkey, because a child's brain is far better. The child often knows more about the parents than the parents about the child."

Rabbi Louis Binstock, New Orleans, described fear as the greatest cause of mental disorders. It is up to society, he said, to relinquish the fears of persons under duress of economics, poverty, starvation, old age, unemployment, prejudices and hatred of races, politics and religion.

"Individuals must teach themselves to face fear fearlessly, frankly and honestly."

JAPAN'S TRADE COMPETITION

The report of the United States Tariff Commission on the trade between the United States and Japan explodes the charge so often advanced by jingo elements in this country and those who are not informed as to the facts that Japanese imports are flooding the markets of this country at the expense of American industry.

It is shown that trade between the two countries has increased materially, on both sides, during the past few years, but that all things considered, we have secured the best of the bargain instead of Japan's industries having, as we have been told, reaped huge profits with Uncle Sam holding the bag.

In 1929, Japan took only 5 per cent of our total exports, but by 1934 this had grown to 10 per cent, but our purchases from Japan fell from 10 per cent of our total imports in 1929 to 7 per cent in 1934.

In 1935 there was a slight increase in our imports from Japan and decrease in our exports to that country, but it still remains that during the year we sold upwards of $200,000,000 of goods to the Japanese while buying only about $150,000,000 from them.

It is true that Japan has increased her exports of cotton cloth to practically all foreign markets while there has been an accompanying decline in American exports, but the report points out that even in the South American countries, where the Japanese have made the greatest gains, her trade is still small as compared with American exports.

The New York Times takes the position that "the falling off in our own foreign trade has been basically owing to the absolute shrinkage of foreign markets and not to the competition of Japan or any other nation." The Times continues that "after all the outcries over Japanese trade competition it is refreshing to have the balanced and authoritative study by the tariff commission."

The commission points out that the United States is responsible to a major degree in the development of Japanese exports to this country, citing that—

Apparently the initiative in developing the trade in some articles was taken by American dealers. Some of these dealers provided samples and made specifications for manufacture in Japan. There has also been a considerable tendency to shift from Germany to Japan as a source of supply of various novelties and specialties.

The Mobile Press warns that "what Americans ought to remember is that we have our militarists as much as the Japanese," and expresses the opinion that—

The inescapable conclusion seems to be that there is no valid reason why Americans should regard the Japanese with suspicion or with fear. The only danger to the peaceful relations between the two nations is that the jingoists in both may arouse irrational hatred.

Japan's remarkable industrial development during recent years has added another great exporting nation to the competition for world trade and certain adjustments have been and will continue to be necessary, but this does not mean that there is any grave threat to American industry as a result.

The increase in world trade from year to year should be larger than the output of Japanese industry, thus leaving still expanding markets for the consumption of American goods.

SPEEDING UP COURT ACTION

Steps taken by the Oklahoma supreme court to speed up consideration of cases on its docket are cited by the Journal of the American Judicature Society as an outstanding example of what the courts can do toward bringing to an end long delays in the final adjudication of legal actions of all kinds.

It is cited that up to two years ago the Oklahoma court has never since its creation been able to keep abreast with its work, the number of untried appeals having ranged around 2,000. Faced with a condition growing steadily worse, the court adopted rules for saving its time, operated in divisions and had a determination of facts made and accepted in advance of argument.

These reforms in procedure were helpful, but they were not enough and the untried cases continued to pile up. Then the court, acting on the doctrine that it had power commensurate with its responsibility, created, in conjunction with the state bar, a judicial council and evolved a plan to use district judges and members of the bar, without salary.

At the beginning of 1934, 35 judges and 150 lawyers constituted the new machinery of the court and began sitting in groups of three. Cases that came before the court were disposed of at a rate twice as fast as they were filed, 652 having been filed in the first 10 months of 1935 and 1,314 cleared from the docket.

As a result the court is now practically within sight of its goal, a docket clear of untried cases.

The American Judicature Society, organized in 1913 at the University of Michigan to promote the efficient administration of justice, comments that—

The system devised and boldly adopted by the Oklahoma supreme court justices has worked. There was no precedent for this system. But there was the obvious right and duty of the supreme court to employ all its judicial powers to improve the situation. The duty is being discharged with the aid of the judicial council and the aid of trial judges and lawyers, working voluntarily, with the single aim of making justice real and practical.

The plan adopted by the Oklahoma supreme court may not be feasible in all states, but certainly it is an impressive demonstration of the fact that some way can be found to facilitate court procedure in both trial and appellate courts.

The Journal of the Judicature Society points out that the clearing of the docket of the Oklahoma court has had the further beneficial effect of reducing the number of cases appealed, commenting that "there is reason to believe the decline will be more considerable when the court is able to decide cases as promptly as is possible when there is no congestion; congestion is a sure breeder of congestion."

Many cases are now appealed when the attorneys making the appeal know there is no chance for a favorable ruling, the action being taken simply to gain time—now ranging from six months to a year. If attorneys and their clients knew that their appeals would be acted on in a few weeks, few would go to the expense necessary to appeal hopeless cases.

Fine progress has been made within recent months in speeding up Georgia court procedure, but there is still much room for improvement. It will be well for the courts and the bar of the state to give careful study to the Oklahoma plan under which such remarkable results have been obtained.

Badoglio Explains.

Marshal Badoglio, the Italian commander in the north, has been surprisingly loquacious on the recent engagement in the Tembien region, remarks the Manchester Guardian. His official communique was a little essay of over 300 words, quite unlike his usual terse reports, and he has followed it since by giving a long interview to the war correspondents in Tigre. These long and detailed explanations probably reflect a real anxiety as to the situation in the north and a desire to reassure any doubts about the ability of the Italian army to maintain its present position. The Abyssinian raids in December drove back the Italians from the Takkaze river, pushed them out of the Tembien region, and left their most advanced post at Makale isolated and exposed on either flank. Since then the Abyssinians have been trying to surround Makale completely and to cut the one thin stalk through which it is nourished by getting across the road connecting it to the Italian bases to the north.

It was to counter a new and serious threat to achieve this end that Marshal Badoglio ordered his troops to attack on January 19. The fighting which followed lasted for five days, but in the end the Abyssinians failed to cut the road and were beaten back with heavy loss. The Italian casualties were over 700 altogether, the greatest number yet given for any action, but the estimate of 5,000 Abyssinians killed must be accepted with caution, for 5,000 seems to have become a mystic number when reporting Abyssinian losses. But if the Italians prevented the Abyssinians from cutting off Makale, they failed to drive them out of the Tembian region and the strategic position remains exactly the same.

Claque's Price List.

"One wonders whether the "claquers" of America, whom the new manager of the Metropolitan Opera house of New York, is determined to suppress, are as well organized as their colleagues in France. A writer in a musical journal a few years ago stated that in Paris the paid applauders had an efficient union and worked according to a fixed scale of charges. For opera, he said, the fees were carefully graded as follows:

Applause on entry of gentleman	25 francs
Ditto on entry of lady	25 francs
Ordinary applause during performance	10 francs
Insistent applause	16 francs
Still more insistent applause	17 francs
Interruptions with "bene" and "bravo"	5 francs
For an "encore" at any cost	50 francs

The growing habit of exchanging letters between English school children and French, German or Spanish boys and girls leads to some interesting examples of English style. Good Morning

BY LOUIE D. NEWTON.

DR. JOHN HOPE.

Not only Atlanta, not only Georgia, not only the south, but well may we say the entire nation and the educational world has lost one of its truly great leaders in the death of J. John Hope. Born June 2, 1868, in Augusta, Ga., this son of the negro race was early recognized by his own people and by the leaders of the white race as a young man of extraordinary ability. Graduating from Worcester Academy, he entered Brown University, where he graduated with honors in 1894. The American Baptist Home Mission Society asked him to identify himself with its educational program. He went first to Roger Williams University for two years of distinguished service, and in 1989 he came back to Georgia as an official of the Atlanta Baptist College, later changed to Morehouse College, and now known as Atlanta University. Thus for 38 years Dr. Hope has given his life in the upbuilding of the institutions which now constitute Atlanta University.

A distinguished scholar, attested by his writings and his teachings, honored with degrees from five American and Canadian universities, Dr. Hope stood in the front rank of educators and cultural leaders. I shall never forget the occasion in Toronto, Canada, during the sessions of the fourth congress of the Baptist World Alliance, 1928, when McMaster University conferred upon him the degree of doctor of laws. He attended the world missionary conference in Jerusalem in 1931, having been selected from among the Christian leaders of the world as one of the speakers. Rarely has an American educator been more widely recognized throughout the world than was Dr. Hope.

And withal, he was such a gentleman! It was my privilege to serve on the board of trustees of Morehouse College for a number of years prior to the forming of the Atlanta University, and since then to serve on the central board. He was a man of such capacity for leadership as to evoke ever-enlarging gifts from men of wealth who believed in him and in his program. But never was he spoiled by his great achievements. He was always the quiet, considerate gentleman, ever seeking information and inspiration for a task which he regarded as God's will for his life. He knew how to move among kings and he knew how to help the humblest person anywhere. I thank our Father for His good gift of John Hope to our day and generation.

NEWS BEHIND THE NEWS

BY PAUL MALLON.

UTOPIA DEFERRED WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—What snapped elite financiers to attention on the old forgotten war debts issue was a minor announcement from the State Department the other day. The department casually said it had decided Greece could make a 35 per cent payment of interest due on the next installment.

A trivial amount of money is involved, but financial insiders know that Greek finances are generally run by London. Behind the Greek test mouse, they scented the presence of the more formidable British lion. If Britain is leading up to a part payment of interest, it is time for everyone to sit up and take notice.

Visions of reopening the international finance market were immediately conjured. That would provide a way to get rid of our excess gold. It might lead to stabilization, restoration of foreign markets, cure of domestic unemployment—in fact, to a sort of international Utopia.

It is a pretty picture, but you can rest assured it is just as remote as Utopia.

ENCOURAGEMENTS Of course, it is recognized that Greece is not making the payment for fun. Nor are our authorities at the empty war-debt cash box here greatly inspired by the hope that Athens has suddenly become conscience-stricken. It is generally conceded that the European debt conscience is beyond repentance. No one pays on a latent obligation these days without a prospect of getting at least twice as much as he pays.

The Greek purpose seems to be to get at least twice as much around the Johnson act. This is the law preventing defaulting governments from seeking loans in this country. By paying a few thousand dollars, Greece may remove herself from the class of defaulters, then she may try to borrow some big money.

United States government authorities know this or suspect it to a degree which borders on conviction. They also recognize the probability that the Greek offer is a European test case. Even so, there will be no Utopia.

FAULT The reason there won't be is that too many people in this country are against that method of temporary business expansion. The Greeks may be able to float a small loan here. There are enough good restaurant proprietors from the homeland to buy bonds within their financial limitations. But even if that test should prove to be successful in the next six months or so, it will not be an authentic precedent. Britain would find, for instance, that there are not enough British restaurateurs in this country to float a British dinghy, much less a loan.

For another thing, the government crowd is dead set against any such development. The New Dealers are embarked on another course. In that one particular (and only in that one), Agriculture Secretary Wallace lately has been speaking with massed New Deal authority. It is his contention that a prosperity purchased at United States expense through further foreign loan would only double our troubles in the end. To transfer and increase an indebtedness without any prospect of its being met is worse than cancelling the indebtedness entirely.

There is one way in which the debtors could pay—by the transfer of goods or services. The domestic impossibility of that rests on the fact that we have too many goods and the services which Europe could render to us have not yet been suggested, if any.

Consequently, you can afford to remain calm regarding an excitement which is in the offering.

WEIGHT The only real expansion noted hereabouts lately is that of Speaker Byrns. He confessed, in an unguarded moment, to a group of friends the other night, that, when this session of congress started, he weighed 160 pounds. Today he weighs 182.

Osteopaths estimate that, if the present session of congress continues at it has, Mr. Byrns will weigh 250 pounds, no less, by June. That estimation, however, does not consider the tax bill, shortly to be submitted.

All in all, it would be presumptuous to assume that Mr. Byrns will approximate anything like the tonnage of a light cruiser, even though his house continues soporific.

STABILIZATION If you have heard any rumors of devaluation lately, disregard them. There will be no discussion of war debts, stabilization or international finance until the time arrives for an international monetary conference. That is not near.

APOLOGY An apology is obviously due James L. Fly, general solicitor of the TVA. He has privately asserted that he devised the strategy under which the encouraging TVA decision was rendered by the supreme court, and he is correct. That is, he originally sheared the problem of the belief that the government had any right to build power projects as power projects, which was the important point in the case from a legal standpoint. He won.

Republican John Lord O'Brian, who championed this reasoning in court, has conceded that Fly originated this line of argument, although O'Brian argued the case, not Fly.

Therefore, the original statement in this column, to the effect that O'Brian should have conducted earlier New Deal cases, should be amended to the effect that Fly should have conducted them.

LEVEL It is now being said that the credit policy of the Federal Reserve Board is being conducted to restore a 1926 price level, or some price level or other.

If any of you purchasers of commodities are interested, the purpose of the new board seems to be to consider price levels as a secondary manifestation of a deplorable but unremedial situation.

Incidentally, new board members confess off the record that there will be prices, but they have no control of them.

LOSS It is rumored that the radio broadcasting companies have bought meat axes for both sides in the disagreement of the Federal Communications Commission. There will be no loss if they do. The commission is split and no action will be forthcoming until after election.

Six Pages Well Read.

When I was a boy my father had a splendid library which he kept carefully, with the bookcases locked. When any of us youngsters wanted a book we had to ask for it.

There were books in those cases in which I delighted; the novels of Scott, of Dickens, of Thackeray, of Kingsley and the other grand old immortals.

My father, though, belived it violation of the day to read fiction on Sunday.

The church we attended was two miles from our home and father would not ride on Sunday, because it caused labor for coachmen, grooms or street car operators and he would not encourage the working of others on the day of rest.

We walked to and from the church each Sunday morning and repeated the long hike for Sunday school in the afternoon.

On Sunday night father made the journey a third time, but even he conceded that twice was sufficient for younger legs. So we could stay at home on Sunday nights.

Duplicity—I Confess.

On these Sunday nights, if I asked for a book, he would unlock the particular bookcase, hand me the desired volume and then entrust me with the key so I could replace the book and lock it up again when my bedtime came, before he returned from church.

And there was one bookcase with all Dickens' works on the bottom shelf. On the next shelf above was a complete set of Scott's Waverley novels. Above that a shelf with Thackeray and Kingsley. And, on the top shelf, various weighty treatises on creeds and histories of the church. Volumes of sermons and bulky concordances.

One of these volumes was a special favorite of my father's. It was titled "The History of the Reformation."

And each Sunday night, with innocent face, I would ask him to suggest a book for me to read. And he, forgetting always past Sundays, would invariably ask "Have you read 'The History of the Reformation?" And, with guileless expression, I would answer, "No, father."

Then he would say "It's a grand book. You'll enjoy it." And he'd unlock that glorious bookcase and hand it to me.

I would begin to read. Until he was safely out of the house and I was apparently absorbed in the dry-as-dust details of the reformation. As soon as he was gone, back would go that ponderous tome and out would come the particular novel that was my fascination of the day.

Each Sunday he forgot the incident of the week before and we went through the same performance. Each Sunday I started reading "The History of the Reformation." But I never got beyond the sixth page.

Strange Tastes.

While on the subject of reading matter, there may be some peculiar proof of irrationality in the fact that, a few years later, I read and enjoyed Gibbons' "Rise and Fall of the Roman Empire," but I've never been able to finish "Anthony Adverse." And I think Frank Stanton and Robert Loveman are Georgia poets among the immortals, but I can't read "The Marshes of Glynn." Although I've sat under the Lanier oak at Brunswick and tried hard to understand his inspiration.

That's honest confession, anyway.

Twenty-Five Years Ago Today.

A deserved promotion.

From The Constitution of Friday, February 24, 1911:

"J. Prince Webster, for the past two years rate clerk in the office of the state railroad commission, was appointed rate expert by unanimous vote of the commission, yesterday afternoon, to succeed George F. Montgomery, resigned."

And Fifty Years Ago.

Like a boy with a new toy.

Item of Wednesday, February 24, 1886:

"Chief Joyner's new truck reached the city last night, and the head of the Atlanta fire department is happy once more. Early in the night he received a telegram notifying him that the truck would reach the city during the night. The chief read the telegram and then danced. It arrived about 2 o'clock this morning and the chief at once mounted it and sat the night through. This morning his breakfast will be sent down to the truck, and on it he will eat."

DODECANESE

—Italy in Aegean—

Four nations have recently had their eyes focused on the Dodecanese, a small group of islands in the Aegean sea in sight of the Turkish coast. Italy, the present owner, has quartered several thousand troops, more than 200 planes, and 35 warships in the islands, according to the latest news dispatches. This has caused anxiety in England, whose fleet is concentrated not far away off Egypt; in Turkey, which once owned the islands and wants them back; and in Greece, homeland of most of the native population of the islands.

"Overwhelmingly Greek in population and traditions, but unable to join the mother country, the peaceful Dodecanesan archipelago has been, within three decades, a bone of sore contention in the eastern Mediterranean region," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C., headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

RHODES ONCE CRUSADER'S BASE.

"The sun-bathed 'Twelve Islands' of the ancients now include the 13 southern Sporades: Rhodes, Patmos, Cos, Kalymos, Leros, Nisyros, Telos, Symi, Kalki, Astypalaia, Karpathos, Kasos and Lipsos.

"Rhodes, in the south, is the largest, most fertile, most historic and, consequently, the most visited island of the group. From within its medieval walls rise the delicate white tips of many minarets, the domes of mosques, the feathered tops of palm trees and the square roofs of Mediterranean houses. There are extensive monuments of the days of its medieval glory, when the Knights of St. John made Rhodes their headquarters for forays against the Moslems. Along the straight and narrow Street of the Knights are ranged the barracks of the various 'Tongues,' or companies, into which the national groups of knights were divided. Visitors may walk around the old city on top of the magnificent 14th and 15th century walls.

"The City of Rhodes is the Italian capital of the Dodecanese. It is a large town, greatly modernized and refurbished during the last decade or two. New hotels and regular steamship service attract many visitors to the island, both in winter and summer.

"Patmos, according to historians, was the home of St. John the Evangelist during his banishment. The visions recorded in his Book of Revelation are said to have appeared to him here where now stands a great monastery in his name.

EACH ISLAND HAS ITS CLAIM TO FAME.

"Kalki, with its many traces of an ancient Greek acropolis; Telos, famous for its caverns and ruins, salves and herbal unguents; Symi, whose people have always been expert shipbuilders and sponge divers; Karpathos, with its bold mountains, silver and iron mines and gypsum quarries; Cos, verdant and scenic, where a temple of Asclepius, the ancient God of Medicine, bears witness to the healthful climate; Nisyros, small, round, of volcanic origin, best wooded of the Dodecanese, noted for its hot springs; Kalymnos, land of honey and the shadowy Cavern of the Seven Virgins; Leros, flat and fertile, with its magnificent Bay of Lakki, which the Italians are developing as an eastern Mediterranean naval base; Astypalaia, almost two islands, whose waters hold some of the finest sponges in the world—each island has its special claim to fame.

"Cereals, vegetables and tobacco, fruits and flowers grow abundantly in the sparkling Mediterranean sunshine. Arbors of grapes, fields of melon vines, orchards of oranges, lemons, figs, almonds, peaches, apricots, pomegranates, pears, apples and olives brighten the hillsides with their blossoms and supply the markets with a variety of products.

"Rhodes (from the Greek for 'rose') is famous for its flowers. Roses, oleanders, holyhocks, cyclamens, bougainvillea, hibiscus, wild poppies, anemones, asphodel and orchids abound. Even in arid and rocky sections, porches and windows are laden with gay flower boxes and decorative plants. Myriad bees feast on the blossoms and Dodecanesian honey rivals that of Greece's Attica.

"Sheep, goats and cattle graze on the slopes. The butter of Symi and Kasos, the thin cheese of Cos and the wool of Karpathos and Cos are all noted beyond the islands.

SPONGE FISHERY PICTURESQUE INDUSTRY.

"Most famous and picturesque industry of the Dodecanese, however, is the sponge fishery. The natives of Symi, Kalymnos and Kalki have been engaged in this trade so long that the sponge beds of the neighboring islands are seriously depleted. Now most 'spongers' undertake difficult voyages in small boats to the coasts of Tripoli, Egypt, Crete and Syria. Expert divers carry large flat stones to hasten their descent to the sea floor, where the sponges grow. Two to three and a half minutes is the usual time a diver stays under water. Sometimes mechanical diving equipment is used.

"Aristotle claimed that a woman of Cos, Pamphile by name, discovered the use of silk as a fabric. Today the silkworm is widely cultivated throughout the Dodecanese.

"From medieval times until capture by Italy in 1912, the Dodecanese belonged to Turkey, in spite of their Greek population. Italy has held the islands since, although Greece, Turkey and Great Britain have questioned her right of ownership. However, by the Treaty of Sevres, and by the second Treaty of Lausanne in 1923, the Dodecanese were formally assigned to Italy."

"Lead, Kindly Light."

John Henry Newman was born in 1801 in London, son of a banker. He was the first Protestant to become a cardinal of the Roman Catholic church after conversion. His hymn, "Lead Kindly Light" is sung by all denominations. It was written when he was 33 and becalmed with many other passengers on a small orange-boat in the Straits of Bonifacio (Mediterranean).

Small Worries.

A man on trial for his life was being examined by a group of alienists. Suddenly one doctor jumped up and shouted at him: "Quick, how many feet has a centipede?"

The man came back in a dry, dry voice:

"Gad, is that all you have to worry about?"

If the Ox Works Better When Furious, the Master Goads Him to Fury

By ROBERT QUILLEN.

Since the beginning of history, men have fought and died to escape slavery; yet today the great majority of mankind are enslaved by trickery.

If you are made drunk by an enemy and in that witless state used by him for some purpose of his own, you are his slave, are you not?

Or if he hypnotizes you, so that you no longer have a will of your own, and then uses you as a tool, are you not enslaved?

When the mind is enslaved, the man is enslaved.

You are, let us say, a sane and seasoned man, just, tolerant and reasonable.

A stranger from another section comes into your neighborhood and is accused of a crime. You may think him guilty, but you can see both sides of the case and you wish to give him a fair trial.

But men in that other section, from which the stranger came, begin to meddle. They say the man is obviously innocent; that you and your neighbors are heathen incapable of giving him a fair trial. And they pledge themselves to interfere and save him if they can.

What happens to you? You go mad. You are no longer capable of fairness. You hate the meddling outlanders and the accused stranger. And you vow, by the eternal, to see him properly hanged if it is the last thing you do.

The unreason of other men has destroyed your reason. You are wholly enslaved by prejudice. Your biased mind is utterly incapable of seeing anything but evil in the stranger and his kind.

The capacity for prejudice, whether sectional, racial, religious or class, makes simple men the pawns of politicians.

By shrewd appeal to sleeping prejudice, selfish and ambitious men hypnotize the tools they need to win an office or make war, and the tools never realize that smarter men are using them.

It isn't the chain that makes a slave, but helplessly doing a master's will. And he is no less a slave because the master uses sly words instead of a whip.

HEALTH TALKS

BY DR. WILLIAM BRADY

Just as long as we have in the medical profession two schools of thought—the docs plunging ahead and the orthodocs holding back—there will be some who call it cri and some who solemnly assure you it is due to change of weather, a draft or wet feet.

I don't mind the orthodocs sounding off about "the common cold," for it seems to me there is genuine humor in their attitude. Or maybe my sense of humor is abnormal. At any rate I have to chuckle every time I read a ponderous dissertation on the nature, cause, prevention and cure of "common colds," because it is so obvious that the particular author expresses his personal views and that every other orthodoc who discusses the subject at all likewise expresses his own personal views. The discerning reader must inevitably conclude that science is wonderful.

The orthodocs, that is, the reactionaries, the oldtimers, who assume that because doctors have always believed a thing it must be so, speak learnedly of "lowered resistance" or "keeping up good resistance" and merely because they have so long juggled this nebulous notion they are irritated and offended when anybody asks "What do you mean resistance? Of course they don't know what they mean—that's what annoys them.

One who implies or infers that everyday exposure to sudden changes, cold, draft, wet feet or dampness keeps the "resistance" constantly "lowered" certainly does not mean immunity. There is neither scientific experimental nor convincing clinical evidence to support the conception that immunity is subject to such hectic variations. The significance of the "resistance" idea is simply this: I am Medical Tradition. This is my story and I must stick to it.

Recent deaths of movie actresses and others from tuberculosis which supervened upon a period of "dieting" in the endeavor to reduce to sub-standard weight, serve as a sad example of the relation between nutrition and immunity. Not that adiposity or superfluous flesh protects against tuberculosis, for indeed we find that recovery from tuberculosis is not favored by accumulation of any excess weight. But persons who follow restricted dietary regimens which do not provide for certain essentials of nutrition and vitality, achieve weight reduction only at the cost of health. In the instances mentioned, it seems probable that the young women suffered grave lowering of vitality and specific failure to maintain immunity against the latent tuberculosis which nearly all adults harbor.

Scientific evidence is accumulating to warrant the teaching that an adequate vitamin ration is indispensable for the maintenance of immunity against tuberculosis and immunity against infection in general or at least some other infections. Just which vitamin is most essential, or whether several vitamins each contribute an influence, we are not yet prepared to say. But we do know that any reduction regimen which fails to provide an optimal vitamin ration is a dangerous one in any circumstances.

Phonograph's Birth.

Patent No. 200,521, was granted 31-year-old Thomas A. Edison in 1878 on the most original of his inventions—the "speaking machine or phonograph." An earlier application for a patent on the device had been turned down on the ground that it was not "new and useful."

Hollywood Today

BY SHEILAH GRAHAM.

HOLLYWOOD, Feb. 23.—In the winter of 1906, a young, ambitious immigrant leased a ladies' goods store on Milwaukee avenue, Chicago, transformed it into the white front theater—seating capacity, 200—and with a flourish of mouth-to-mouth advertising presented a one-reel film, "From Newsboy to Judge." Admission price was five cents, and patrons could—if they desired—sit through 15 showings a day, and 20 on Sundays and holidays.

Today, exactly 30 years later, every important star, director, writer and executive in Hollywood will trek to the Universal Studios to celebrate with the 69-year-old pioneer, affectionately known in and out of the industry as "Uncle Carl" Laemmle, his great part in raising the motion picture industry to its present position of world-wide entertainment importance.

Mr. Laemmle was nursing a bad toothache when this writer called on him for his views regarding the changes that have occurred in the picture industry during his long regime, but with characteristic fortitude he refused to postpone the interview.

"The best thing that has happened to the industry in my time is the recent League of Decency campaign," he stated. "In spite of the improvements due to sound and better recordings, pictures were on the point of ruining their market through putting too much sex in their film offerings. The decency campaign was a blessing in disguise, and forced producers to make better, cleaner pictures."

Temperament, sophisticated film fare, too much talking, the high cost of actors and actresses, and uncertainty about public taste are, in the veteran producer's opinion, responsible for the unsatisfactory financial condition of the motion picture industry today.

"We still have a lot to learn," he continued. "In my opinion two of the greatest mistakes made by producers at the present time are the tendency to make sophisticated pictures that only the mature, adult minds can comprehend, and too much dialogue in the place of action. For 30 years I have been making pictures that entire families might attend as a group. There is no logical reason for suddenly changing. Box office figures back up my statement that movies should be made for the masses.

"In regard to sound, I believe motion pictures should move. They should have action and not be pictorial arguments of social problems. Pictures, themselves, are the universal language. We should welcome stars from all parts of the world, and not hamper their greatness by binding them with so many words they are unable to perform satisfactorily.

"I have a tremendous respect for the accomplishments of those pantomimists who rose to fame in the silent pictures. The public seems to have the same regard—for a majority of the leading stars today came from their ranks—Chaplin, Crawford, Garbo, Shearer, Gaynor and the ever-popular western stars.

"Perhaps the industry would have benefited to a greater extent if third-dimensional photography had been developed prior to the introduction of sound: If pictures had been perfected as such, before flat shadows on the screen were given voice.

"However, I believe that, when the premature introduction of sound into the picture industry and the subsequent great improvement in recording have been coupled with correspondingly revolutionary improvements in the photographic field, motion pictures will present the greatest entertainment offered the public.

"It is true that, in the old days, there was more romance in the making of pictures. For one thing, actors and actresses were closer to their work. They felt they were founding a new form of expression and put more of themselves into their work than the film actors of today."

LANDON IS EXPECTED TO ENTER OHIO VOTING

cided with a New Deal invasion of Missouri and Kansas where Postmaster General James A. Farley launched President Roosevelt's mid-western reelection campaign. Farley spoke in Jefferson City, Mo., and Topeka, Kan. He arraigned former President Hoover and the American Liberty league and by inference challenged the claims made for Landon as a balancer of budgets. Farley emphasized the importance of federal contributions to Kansas not only for the cost of relief but to aid agriculture and business. He told his mid-western listeners it would be impossible to take the government out of business for some time to come because federal credit still was a factor in business recovery.

But bright in a week-end of political fair weather for Landon were tabulations of a syndicated poll designed to reflect national sentiment. Landon led by a wide margin in the test for presidential preference. Borah was second and others were practically out of the running as of the present.

Borah Chances Improve.

On another front, however, Borah chances improved considerably. Frank E. Gannett, publisher of the Gannett newspapers, indorsed the senator as the man to meet President Roosevelt in the campaign. The opinion that Borah would most likely be among the republicans to regain the upstate New York vote which the G. O. P. needs to win New York in November. There are 14 Gannett newspapers in New York state and one each in Connecticut, New Jersey and Illinois.

Borah has raised in New York and other presidential primary states a challenge to favorite-son or uninstructed delegations. Invading New York in his first campaign speech last month, the senator said the people had permitted themselves to be disenfranchised in presidential elections by accepting boss rule which prevented popular expression of presidential preference in those states with primary laws.

Satisfied With Convention.

He announced this week, however, that he was satisfied that favorite son strategies had been disrupted and that there would be a fair test of popular preference in advance of the nominating convention in Cleveland, Ohio, June 9.

Landon has made no public announcement of his campaign plans or even acknowledged formally that he is a candidate for president. His Washington advisers have been of the opinion that he would not enter primaries in Ohio or elsewhere, contenting himself for the time being with the support of the Kansas convention delegation and any other non-primary state group which may pledge itself to him. The Governor is adapting to a pre-convention campaign the front porch strategy made famous by McKinley and later by Warren G. Harding. Of the scores of speaking invitations showered upon him, Landon has accepted fewer than half a dozen for the pre-convention period.

THIEVES RAID GARAGE, TAKE PACKAGES, AUTO

The automobile of Slaton Clemmons, Atlanta veterans' bureau attorney, was stolen at about 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning from a storage garage at 19 Porter place by three white men who held up a negro attendant.

Robert Gibson, negro, of an Auburn street address, the attendant, told police the men entered and asked, "Where's the liquor car?" When he told them he knew nothing about such a car, they drew pistols.

As one bandit covered Gibson with a weapon, the others stole three packages from an automobile. They then stepped into Clemmons' car and drove off.

TENNESSEEAN KILLED FOR KISSING THE BRIDE

WARTBURG, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP) A serenader who kissed the bride was dead and the groom and another man were jailed here today a few hours after a wedding.

Harry Hall, 43, was shot to death, and Reed Clark, the groom, admitted the shooting because "a serenade's all right but kissing my wife is not." Lloyd Young, 21, also was arrested by Sheriff H. E. Byrge. Long accompanied Clark at the time of the shooting.

Hall, a railway employe, is survived by his widow and six children.

NEW POLICE CARS

Six Replacements Will Go in Service Today.

The motor "angle" of the Atlanta police department's drive against vice and crime will be speeded up today when six new, fast automobiles are placed in radio car service.

The cars, representing trade-ins on old automobiles, arrived here last Friday and have been equipped with radio and other apparatus.

The department is also purchasing a new patrol wagon, which is due to arrive this week. This purchase is a trade-in also. Two patrol wagons are in use.

The department maintains 75 motor vehicles in use at all times. This includes 20 motorcycles, two signal trucks, radio cars and other motor equipment.

are proof of hostile intentions by Japan. "By the seizure of Manchuria and North China the Japanese militarists are seeking to create a jumping off spot for a war against the U. S. S. R.," the soviet paper added.

German Armament.

The press estimated that Germans have 2,000,000 men under arms and 8,000,000 employed in munition and armament plants. The number of planes of the German air force was placed at 4,000 and British estimates were cited to show that German factories are producing 300 pieces of artillery and 200 tanks monthly.

Japanese industry is organized, the newsppaer said, to produce during the first year of war thousands of field guns, a million shells, a million rifles, 30,000 machine-guns, 1,000 tanks, 3,000 airplanes and 600,000 tons of warships.

Poland was declared to have 1000 airplanes, 600 tanks and to be building roads to facilitate the transportation of German troops to the soviet border.

Finland was accused of preparing airdromes for use of German military machines.

Mutual Action Pact.

An article in the newspaper Pravda said Japanese and German negotiations, which are reported here to have resulted in a military understanding, also included a proposal for mutual action by naval forces. (Both Germany and Japan have denied such an agreement.)

Celebration of the red army anniversary included contests among civilian marksmen, airplane flights, parachute jumping, gas mask drills and long ski runs.

Moscow subway workers marched en masse to flying fields and shooting ranges to take part in matches.

It was announced that 900,000 civilians have passed the first tests for rating as "voroshiloff" or crack marksmen, 15,000 factory workers became glider pilots last year, 16,000 persons jumped in parachutes from airplanes, 800,000 from parachute towers and 1,000,000 have passed tests in defense technique against aerial and chemical warfare.

Twelve thousand employes of the Moscow Kuibisheff electrical equipment plant worked for two and a half hours wearing gas masks, after marching through a smoke chamber, in a test to determine the possibility of keeping industry running under war conditions.

The management reported that, despite the handicap of the masks, many of the workers exceeded their ordinary output.

MUSSOLINI PLANNING INCREASED AIR FORCE

as they are completed they are placed in home service, replacing older machines which are sent to Africa.

It was estimated that Italy, before the present building program, possessed some 3,000 planes, of which 900 are new and modern, 1,600 fairly new and serviceable and the rest, antiquated and useful only for transport and training. When this year's building program is completed, it was estimated Italy will have at least 3,000 new first line planes.

Because Ethiopia does not possess any aviation worthy of note and because of uneasiness of the European situation, Italy is keeping most of her best planes in readiness at home. Only about 400 planes are in Africa, divided about evenly between the Eritrean and Somaliland fronts.

Prepare for Emergency.

Experts agree that Italy is not feverishly increasing the number of he fighting planes for use in Africa, but for any emergency which may develop in Europe.

The majority of the new planes will be "81" type bombers, but there will be a good proportion of caproni "101" and "111" bombers, not so speedy as the others but very effective.

There will be a good sprinkling of pursuit and observation planes, supposed to exceed 400 kilometers an hour, and with a ceiling of 10,000 meters. They carry from three to five rotating machine guns.

Officials Expect Early Agreement Between U. S., Panama on Treaty

American Demand for Unrestricted Right To Carry Out Military Maneuvers in Canal Zone Is Disputed Point in Negotiations.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—A United States demand for unrestricted right to carry out military maneuvers in Panama was disclosed today as a disputed point in negotiations on a treaty to replace the 1903 pact.

High state department officials asserted, however, that the two years of discussions were nearing a conclusion and that the prospect was good for a settlement of all questions at issue. They voiced the hope that an early agreement on a treaty would result.

Some surprise was occasioned in official quarters over the statement in Panama by Jose Isaac Fabrega, Panamian foreign minister, that the disputed military question had caused a set-back in the deliberations.

Sumner Welles, assistant secretary of state in charge of Latin-American affairs, who has been directing the negotiations for the United States, said the talks were continuing as usual and that the Panamanian minister, Ricardo Alfaro, had an appointment with him for tomorrow for further discussions.

The assistant secretary declined to make any other comment on the negotiations because, he said, officials of both governments had agreed not to discuss them in any way until they were concluded.

In other responsible quarters, it was asserted that virtually all points in the proposed treaty had been agreed upon except the request that no limits be placed on United States military units in the Canal zone in carrying out maneuvers.

This proposal was described in Panama as an "obscure point with reference to sovereignty of national territories."

The 1903 treaty which would be replaced by the new agreement gave the United States the right to "construct, maintain and defend" the Panama Canal. Since that waterway was completed, the Panama government has claimed that some of the treaty provisions have infringed on its sovereignty with regard to property rights.

The treaty created a zone embracing territory contiguous to the canal which was placed under American administration and where an army garrison is maintaining for defense purposes.

Panama dissatisfaction with some parts of the treaty was climaxed in 1934 with its refusal of the United States' check for $250,000 representing this government's annual rental payment on the canal.

The Panamanian government demanded payment in gold. This was stipulated in the 1903 treaty, but was outlawed the United States claimed by abrogation of the gold payment contract clause in the process of the administration's revaluation of the dollar.

The 1935 rental check also was rejected on the ground that Panama would suffer a loss if it accepted payment other than in gold.

Another payment will be due shortly, but it was understood authoritatively that the treaty negotiations have brought about a settlement of this dispute in a manner satisfactory to both sides. There was no indication as to the details of the settlement.

Negotiations for a new treaty were concluded during the Hoover administration but the Panamanian government failed to ratify the pact. Meanwhile, the 1903 treaty still is in effect.

Securities amounting to $35,722,134.15 included above are deposited as required by law.

The liabilities, including policy reserves calculated on the most conservative basis used by American life insurance companies, were $2,126,880,881 on December 31, 1935. A Special Investment Reserve of $40,000,000 not required by law, and reserves of $40,073,472 for dividends payable to policyholders in 1936 are included in the liabilities.

Surplus funds reserved for general contingencies amounted to $116,706,871.

Mortality was favorably low. Expenses were slightly higher, due chiefly to increased taxation.

The interest yield on securities obtainable in 1935 of the high quality and type demanded by the Company for the investment of its policyholders' funds declined throughout the year. In view of the general financial situation and in adherence to the Company's principle that safety is the first requisite in life insurance and must always be the first consideration, the Company deemed it prudent to strengthen its reserves.

At the close of 1935 the Company had 2,672,636 policies in force giving insurance protection of more than $6,620,800,000 to homes, families and business interests. The amount of new insurance issued by the Company during the year was $466,356,000. In addition, men and women paid $40,428,582 to the Company for annuities to provide a guaranteed life income.

During its history of 91 years, throughout every financial and economic crisis, the New York Life has met every obligation it assumed. Today, as in the past, it is sound and safe. Policyholders may be assured as to their wisdom in making provision for their dependents in event of death and for themselves in old age through their insurance in this Company.

A more complete report listing the securities owned by the Company, as well as detailed information on any of our policy contracts, will gladly be sent upon request to the Company's Home Office, 51 Madison Avenue, New York, or to any of its Branch Offices throughout the United States and Canada.

DEATH OF ROOSEVELT MOURNED BY NATION

Assistant Secretary of Navy To Be Buried Tuesday in Arlington.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Flags on navy ships throughout the seven seas fluttered at half-mast today in official mourning—the first since Calvin Coolidge died—for Colonel Henry Latrobe Roosevelt.

Fifth of the naval-minded Roosevelts to serve as assistant secretary of the navy, the President's distant cousin died of an acute heart attack last night at Naval hospital. He had been ill with intestinal influenza.

President and Mrs. Roosevelt arranged to cut short their stay at Hyde Park, N. Y., to return to the capital early Tuesday for funeral services at historic St. John's Episcopal church.

The late assistant secretary, a former marine corps officer, will be buried with full military honors on the sloping green hillsides of Arlington cemetery overlooking the Potomac river.

Informed of his relative's death while attending the initiation of his youngest son, John, into Harvard University's "Fly Club," the chief executive said he was "inexpressibly shocked," and returned to Hyde Park.

Secretary Swanson, who is seriously ill at Naval hospital, was informed today of his assistant's sudden death. Physicians said the secretary had spent "a very good night" and was "improving." They waited until after he had a good night's rest, however, before breaking the news.

Members of the cabinet, high ranking government officials, and navy and marine officers called at the Roosevelt home during the day to pay their respects.

Under tentative arrangements, a detail of marines with whom Colonel Roosevelt served in several expeditions, will carry his casket to its last resting place in the burial ground for the nation's heroes.

Honorary pallbearers will be named from Colonel Roosevelt's close friends among the high ranking admirals of the navy and senior marine corps officers.

1832-B

AN ALLURING DAYTIME FROCK.

The yoke of this frock is unusual and a distinctive departure from the obvious round or squared-off affair, because it extends out over the shoulders and forms flaring little caps—caps which conceal two inverted pleats and which are transformed into lovely loose raglan sleeves. The blouse gathers at the yoke and waist in front and back rendering fullness and a soft drapey appearance. The twin panels in the skirt give you height, and the skirt an added swirl. Two huge gathered pockets in unison with the blouse are interesting features and very practical. Make a self-fabric belt trimmed with a diamond shaped buckle and two harmonizing buttons, and notice how smart and up-to-the-minute your frock will be.

Barbara Bell pattern No. 1832-B is available in sizes 32, 34, 36, 38, 40, 42 and 44. Size 36 requires 4 7-8 yards of 35-inch material.

Price of pattern 15 cents. Do not send stamps.

Send for the spring Barbara Bell pattern book. Make yourself attractive, practical and becoming clothes selecting designs from the 100 Barbara Bell well-planned, easy-to-make patterns. Friendly Counsel

By CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Problems of general interest submitted by readers will be discussed in this column. Correspondence invited. Your name held in confidence. Write Miss Chatfield, care The Atlanta Constitution.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

The road I am on has so many bends in it that I am scared to death that I will make a wrong step. I have been picking life to pieces—including my sweetheart, I love him. He adores me. We are planning our marriage. But there are some mental hazards, if not other sorts. I have a good education, including post-graduate work. My family has social position as well as other advantages. The young man has had very little education but is struggling to get more as he works. He has a fine character, no bad habits and enormous possibilities. But there is his family and they will always be there in spite of anything he does. He has risen far above them. Is this disparity going to cause embarrassments that will wreck our happiness?

SERIOUS-MINDED.

ANSWER:

It seems to me that the answer to your question lies in what your education has done for you. If it has made you wise and tolerant, broad-minded and generous, enabled you to distinguish between essentials and non-essentials, then there is no reason to fear that the embarrassment which will arise out of your marriage to a man who is socially and educationally less privileged, will wreck your happiness. But if your education hasn't taught you the difference between pride and false pride, if it hasn't taught you to value a man for what he is rather than for his family tree, there is trouble ahead if you marry him.

A woman naturally wants her husband to shine before her friends and her family. She likes nothing better than to bask in the reflected glory. She loves to have people comment on his good English, his polished manner. She enjoys being squired by a man that knows his way around and is at home in any situation. She is proud to tell her children of their father's distinguished heritage, point to the old portraits, the old mahogany and the old silver that were used in his family for generations. She gets a big kick out of his having graduated from one of the big-four universities and his being able to refer familiarly to his Alma Mater. Yet all of these things won't give her the same satisfaction as she can have in his being a fine character with no bad habits and plenty of ambition.

This is the glory of America: that no matter how humbly a man may be born he sets his own limits on the heights to which he may climb. Ignorant, he can learn to speak correctly. Unacquainted with social customs, he can soon catch on. He may pull without a penny and without any pull and make his pile. He can acquire polish and power and ride the crest of the wave if he has brains, ambition and ability.

In America every marriage starts a new family that doesn't depend upon forebears for its social, financial or cultural rating. If between them a young couple has the goods they can deliver and there are plenty of takers. The wife determines the social position of the family, the husband determines the financial position and together they determine the cultural position in their community. In a home of great wealth in this country where there are art treasures valued at thousands of dollars an old lady comes occasionally to visit her son and his wife. They are on the top rung of the ladder while the old lady doesn't know the names of the men who wrote the books or painted the pictures that decorate her son's home. Long, long ago he left her below while he climbed to the top. But because he had character as well as ability, he never forgot to stoop down and pick her up beside him and to point with pride to his humble parentage.

Yes, a man's family "is always there and they will always be there," but no matter where they are and who they are, they needn't keep him from going yonder if he has what it takes.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

Things That Make Women More Beautiful

(Posed by Gertrude Michael)

A Face Powder That Costs Little and Stays on All Day Long

BY MIGNON.

There is one thing that women are always in search of, and that is a face powder that stays where you put it. There are other requirements, of course, one being that the powder be sifted finely and another that it be agreeable in fragrance, if it has any.

The powder that I am telling you about now is not new, but it certainly is fine and, believe me, it sticks like a long-lost brother. You get plenty of it for your money. It is inexpensive. Some stores are offering an introductory package which has a small bottle of perfume on top, for which you pay nothing extra. If you like it, that is the company's good luck, for you will probably come back and buy some more.

New? No! Ten years ago I knew a girl who would not use anything else and she was always perfectly powdered. The price is not much more than a half a dollar. Being finely sifted, the powder lasts.

If you wish to know the name of the product mentioned above and where it may be obtained, phone Mignon at The Constitution. Do not write unless you live outside the city, in which case inclose a stamped self-addressed envelope.

"Come Clean" Is the Wording for Doris' Bathroom Shower.

By FLORENCE La GANKE.

The girls in Doris' crowd were planning showers for her. She was an unusually popular girl so the showers were many. Perhaps the one that Jane planned for her was among the nicest. To this party her most intimate friends were asked. Jane said, "I am planning a bathroom shower. We can get her towels of all sizes, bath sheet, bath mat, wash cloths, shower curtain. Then there is the wide choice in bath salts, bath oils, dusting powder, bath room bottles, bath brushes, rubbing alcohol, first aid box, eye cups, nail brushes. Some of you may want to give bath room scales or stools. Now with all these possibilities I thing we ought to plan our purchases, so we agree on colors or perfumes and so on. Most of us are going to be asked to a great many showers and the expense is going to be considerable. I wonder whether we can't find a way to make our gifts practical and yet not too expensive."

"After much discussion it was decided to get all white towels. This would let Doris work out her own color scheme. Jane knew she was going to have a white bathroom with pale pink tile wainscoting and floor. Her accent of color was to be a rich blue, but not a namby pamby color. The towels, bath mat, wash cloth and linen towels were brought over to Jane's the day before the party. She wrapped them all in pale pink paper and tied the packages with blue ribbon. The invitations had suggested that here was a chance for Jane to "come clean" with the story of her engagement. And her plans for the honeymoon.

During the afternoon the group did some soap carving, designing the house in which Doris was to live. The refreshments were a frozen fruit salad served on white plates with mayonnaise made almost white with whipped cream. Bath buns accompanied the salad. Angel food and coffee topped with whipped cream completed the clean white refreshments.

Nancy has a leaflet on "Showers." Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for your copy. Write Nancy Page, care of The Atlanta Constitution.

POOL BALL INTRODUCED AS DANGEROUS WEAPON

A pool ball thrown during a brawl in a poolroom at Mangum and Mitchell streets late Saturday night fractured the skull of Sam Orr, negro, 46, of a Markham street address.

He was admitted to Grady hospital in an unconscious condition. His condition last night was reported as serious. Police, seeking his assailant, did not reveal whether the "eight ball" was used as the missile.

TURPENTINE HURLED IN ATTACK BLINDS MAN

Turpentine hurled in his face by three negroes in a mysterious attack temporarily blinded Henry Martin, 36, of 648 East Fair street, late Saturday night as he was walking on Decatur street, near Bell.

Martin was burned about the face and eyes, and was admitted to Grady hospital. His condition is fair. The turpentine was hurled as the negroes passed him in an automobile.

Culbertson on Contract

By ELY CULBERTSON.
World's Champion Player and Greatest Card Analyst.

Responses to Forcing Take-Outs.

When you have opened the bidding and your partner, by a forcing take-out or rebid, has forced you to keep the bidding open, choose your responses as follows:

1. Do not pass, no matter how weak your hand is.
2. Rebid a rebiddable suit, or
3. Show a second biddable suit.
4. Raise partner's suit if you have adequate trump support.
5. Lacking these requirements, bid the number of no trump which is necessary to overcall your partner's bid.

Examples of responses to forcing take-outs:

You have opened the bidding with one diamond and your partner has bid two spades. With: Spades, A J 3; hearts, 7 2; diamonds, A K J 8 4; clubs, 9 6 3, bid three spades (adequate support for his suit).

With: Spades, K 4; hearts, 7 2; diamonds, A K J 8 4; clubs, K 7 5 2, bid three diamonds (not adequate support but a rebiddable diamond suit).

With: Spades 5 4 2; hearts, K 6 3; diamonds, A K J 8; clubs, K 10 4, bid two no trump (4-3-3-3 distribution.)

Defense at Its Best.

To ferret out the one slim chance of defeating a game contract in an almost hopeless situation is an evidence of both expertness and a "never-give-up" spirit.

South, dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ J 8 7 4 ♥ 9 ♦ A Q J ♣ K J 9 6 3
WEST ♠ 5 3 ♥ K Q 10 7 5 2 ♦ 9 7 4 ♣ A 7		EAST ♠ A 6 ♥ J 8 4 3 ♦ 10 6 5 2 ♣ Q 8 3
	SOUTH ♠ K Q 10 9 2 ♥ A 6 ♦ K 8 3 ♣ 10 5 4

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 spade	Pass	3 spades	Pass
4 spades [final bid]

West opened the king of hearts and declarer won with the ace. The king of trumps was the next play, and East won. With no more than lightning calculation of the obvious, that no trick could be won in either the heart or the diamond suit, and that no more than two club tricks were possible, East made the only play that could give his side a fighting chance. He led the eight of clubs up to dummy's formidable suit. West won the ace and returned the seven. Declarer was in a real "spot." If East's club lead had been a singleton the play of the king now would be fatal. East would ruff and a trick still would have to be lost to the queen. Moreover, it looked like a singleton! So declarer made what he considered the safer guess and finessed against the queen. East won with that vital card and returned the third round for West to ruff.

The declarer was not open to criticism; he simply made the unfortunate guess which East's imaginative defense had induced.

TODAY'S QUESTION.

Question: I opened the bidding with one heart. Next hand bid one spade. My partner bid two hearts, which was passed to me. My holding was: Spades, 4; hearts, A K 7 6 5 2; diamonds, A 7 3; clubs, 4 3 2. Should I rebid or pass?

Answer: You should bid three hearts. Your six-card suit makes your hand considerably better than a minimum.

CLARK UNIVERSITY TO HONOR FOUNDER

Exercises To Be Held at School Today; Milton To Speak.

Founders' Day services will be conducted at 10:15 o'clock this morning in the chapel of Clark University. The principle address will be delivered by Dr. Isaac E. Milton, of Columbus, Ohio. A feature of the services will be the reading of an ode written by Dr. Uriah Cleary, first president of the institution.

Dr. Cleary, who is now 89 years old, was president of the university in 1871 when the school occupied quarters at Whitehall and McDaniel streets.

Special music, which has been in preparation for several weeks, will be presented during the ceremonies and immediately following the exercises the ministers of the Atlanta conference of the Methodist Episcopal church will answer to a roll call at which funds will be received from the churches gathered at Lincoln Day rallies.

The contributions will be divided between the university and world service. Alumni, students and friends of the institution have been invited to attend the services. Bishop F. T. Keeney will preside.

Organized as a primary school in a church basement here in 1869, Clark University has expanded until it is now recognized as one of the foremost negro institutions of the country.

It occupies a campus of more than 500 acres and owns 15 modernly-equipped buildings. The latest addition to the physical equipment, Leete hall and Crogman chapel, was built in 1920 at a cost of $225,000.

The university, when first moved to its present location, was a mile south of the city limits and practically isolated during rainy weather. Today it adjoins city property and street railway transportation passes its gates.

WOUNDED GROCER'S CONDITION IS "FAIR"

Two Other Saturday Night Holdups by Armed Negroes Reported.

The condition of Harry Minsk, of 272 Fort street, grocer, in the neck and left arm Saturday night while resisting a holdup which netted negro bandits $7 was reported as "fair" at Grady hospital last night. Several additional holdups in Atlanta were reported to police yesterday.

Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wood, operators of a grocery at 397 Crew street, told detectives two armed negroes took $15 from the cash register and fled shortly after 7 o'clock.

As one of the negroes held at bay with a pistol Mrs. M. Smith, operator of a grocery at 502 Auburn avenue, another negro rifled the cash register of $25 at about 11 o'clock Saturday night. The negroes escaped.

TWO ATLANTA TEAMS ARE BRIDGE FINALISTS

Fred Levy's Quartet Ahead of Hugh Smith's Team at Halfway Point.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 23.—(AP) A spurt in the second 20 boards of an 80-board final match gave an Atlanta team captained by Fred Levy, of Montgomery, a lead of 1,310 points tonight as the halfway mark was reached in the southern championships of the United States Bridge Association.

The team captained by Levy trailed by 120 points at the end of the first 20 boards in the finals this afternoon, but in the next 10 boards wiped out the deficit and pulled out in front by 70 points. It was an all-Atlanta battle in the finals.

The winning foursome also will represent the south in the national tournament in New York March 30.

At the end of 20 boards only 120 points separated the two teams, the one captained by Hugh Smith and composed of John Brumbach, Dr. Charles E. Hall and Mrs. Lucille Thomsom having the slight margin.

Levy's team was composed of Mrs. Humphrey Wagar, Mrs. Spottswood Grant and Ed Nix, all of Atlanta, as his partners.

In the semi-finals completed early today the team captained by Levy eliminated a Birmingham foursome consisting of Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Chappel, and Mr. and Mrs. John D. McNeel by 2,160 points.

The Smith-Hall-Thomson foursome trimmed another Birmingham foursome that became known as the "dark horse" quartet for its sterling early round play by 4,240 points.

The title for the pair play went to Jefferson Glick, of New Orleans, and Mrs. S. R. Young, of Birmingham, last night, with 539 1-2 match points. Second place went to B. O. Johnson and James P. Earle, of Spartanburg, S. C., U. S. B. A. champions, who counter 531 match points.

The third place went to Mrs. F. J. Nivers and Mrs. J. V. Meeker, both of Daytona Beach, Fla., who made 507 1-2 match points.

'WITCH OF NOVIBAZAR' SENTENCED TO DEATH

SOFIA, Bulgaria, Feb. 23.—(UP) The "Witch of Novibazar" has been sentenced to be hanged for six weird murders. She is Tiza Lublimetcn, 67-year-old crippled, hairless and toothless peasant.

In January of last year she convinced peasants of her home village that her personal enemy, Stoyevitch, had sold himself to the devil and thereby obtained supernatural powers which he used to spoil the weather, greatly damaging crops.

Led by Tiza, the peasants dragged Stoyevitch from his house, tied him to a tree and brutally beat him. Tiza finally killed him by stabbing him in the heart. Then she filled the dead man's mouth with glass splinters, alleging this was necessary to prevent him from communicating with the devil and casting further spells.

Later it was found that the "witch" had poisoned five other persons.

Speaks on 'Inner Urge' at West End Baptist

THE REV. M. A. COOPER.

Rev. M. A. Cooper, Baptist Pastor, Preaches on the Inner Urge of Life

Editor's Note: This is the 57th in a series of articles dealing with Atlanta pastors and their services. Additional articles will appear on suceeding Mondays.

Every man has some thing that governs and guides his life, some inner urge, some controlling motive, the Rev. M. A. Cooper, pastor of the West End Baptist church, said yesterday in his sermon, based on the text, "By These Things Men Live."

He said, in part:

These words are a part of Hezekiah's song of thanksgiving which he wrote after his recovery from sickness. In answer to his prayer God lengthened his life 15 years. If God should add that much unto your days, what would you do with it? Our chief aim in desiring life and health is that we may glorify God and do good and improve ourselves in knowledge and grace and fitness for heaven.

By What Do We Live?

The text immediately arrests our attention and stirs us to thinking: "By these things men live." What are the things by which we live? Every man has some thing that governs and guides his life, some inner urge, some controlling motive. Every man has something that he falls back on to give him comfort and support in life's difficult ways. It is worthwhile looking within to see the things that give our own life its zest and bring us consolation. Do we have anything to feed the spirit? Or are we living spiritually on a starvation diet?

Life is a higher thing than mere existence. Man is a complex being, having a soul as well as a body. Life for a man is the culture and development of his soul through the doing of the will of God. The first question we must face is this: "Am I content merely to exist?, or do I mean to live indeed?

What are the things that give life in the true sense of the word?

First of all a conscience void of offense toward God and man. Conscience is God's representative in the soul. It lays down the law to the soul. It gives us the feeling of obligation to do the right and to refrain from doing the wrong. And when we do the right the approval of conscience is a great service of comfort to us. And when we do the wrong the condemnation of conscience is a great cause of pain. A good conscience is a continual feast and they who have that can do without the banquets of the world. Can you lie down to rest at night without encountering the terrors of an aroused conscience?

Live by Ambition.

A second thing by which men really live is a worthy ambition. Ambition is natural to man. The worst thing that can befall a man is to have no ambition, for then the mainspring of his soul is broken, and his energy and elevation are at an end. If you would have something within you that will uphold you amid difficulty and discouragement, get a benevolent ambition, resolve to do some Christian service for your generation; set your heart on the righting of some wrong; or the removing of some ignorance; or the undoing of some burden for others, and you will possess that by which men live.

A third thing by which men really live is a sturdy confidence in God, that He lives, that He loves, that He cares, that He will keep His promises, you will triumph only as you trust. You will fare as you have faith. If you are too lazy to launch out into the deep at the Divine command, then do not blame your shallow life on Providence. The really faithful are the really fortunate, the really famous, the really successful. If you would be rich with God's gold, you must make large drafts on the bank of heaven. The same Lord over all is rich unto all that call upon Him. Some one said to George Muller: "You must live from hand to mouth." "I do," he replied, "but it is God's hand." There will always be meal in the barrel when we are in His will. We grow panicky and fret over making a living. We forget that we are here only to do God's will. Our earthly business is simply to pay the expenses of doing His will. He will supply the need His will creates, and we are to have the faith to believe it.

Life Not Easy.

A fourth thing by which men really live is discipline at the hands of our Father. Life was never meant to be easy and plensant. A certain amount of hardships and suffering comes unfailingly to all. To try to evade it is to miss part of life's opportunity. We cannot develop without discipline. There are things we cannot see except when our eyes have been washed with tears. A soft life is a flabby life. Smooth seas make poor sailors. "It is good for me that I have been afflicted."

A fifth thing by which men really live is "A sense of divine companionship." The believer walks with God and in that fellowship has his sure support. "The best of all," said the dying Wesley, "is that God is with us." There is no solace or support to be compared with that. To know that we are on God's side and that God is on our side that is strength indeed and there are experiences in which nothing else will avail to hold up. The Apostle Paul in thinking of trouble and affliction, distress and persecution and anguish asks the question: What shall we say to these things? Put that question to the things that meet us. What shall we say to disappointments and business loss, closed doors and friends who let us down? What shall we say when the future looks dark and the stars go out one by one? What shall we say to these things? Are we going to let them drive us to self pity and despair, or fling us back upon our Divine Companion, saying: "If God be for us, who can be against us."

"A mighty fortress is our God,
A bulwark never failing.
Our helper He amid the flood,
Of mortal ills prevailing."

We were not meant in ourselves to be equal to life. The first step to power is to realize our helplessness. People talk a good deal today about feeling the strain of life, and our faces and our nerves show it. If we relied more upon our Divine Companion would there not be a peace and a poise which are often absent from our lives? For peace, says someone, is the conscious possession of adequate resources. By this consciousness men really live.

The things that are actually supporting our lives may need to be removed in order that we may fall back on God and discover how real He is. Whatever throws us utterly on God is a blessing. Whatever makes us feel that underneath are the everlasting arms is heaven sent. And now tell me what are the things you live by and I will tell you whether you are a Christian indeed. To what or to whom do you go for strength? To the world, or to God in Christ? In times of weakness, depression and spiritual exhaustion may you cry with David: "Lead me to the Rock that is higher than I."

DANGER OF GAS BLAST AVERTED IN NEWARK

NEWARK, Ohio, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Workmen halted danger of explosion from escaping natural gas in downtown Newark today as they dug through a 55-inch crust of frozen earth and repaired mains broken by a sudden thaw.

The gas, discovered shortly after midnight, filled buildings over a four-block area. Police, firemen and highway patrolmen guarded the section, halting pedestrians and vehicular traffic, while workmen sought location of the leak.

The break in the main was found about dawn, and soon after repairs were made all traces of the gas disappeared.

Several families were routed from their homes in an outlying district by leaking gas.

YOUTH, 16, HELD IN DEATH OF GIRL

Boy Charged With Shooting Young Neighbor With Rifle.

MACON, Ga., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Bill Calhoun, 16-year-old youth of Treutlen county, was being held in the Bibb county jail tonight on a charge of murder in connection with the death of a 14-year-old neighbor girl Saturday night.

Sheriff G. R. Barwick, of Soperton, said he had reports of high feeling as the result of the alleged slaying of Birdie May Darley in the yard of her home about four miles northeast of Soperton and that he thought it advisable to remove the youth to the jail here for a time.

Calhoun was arrested at the home of a relative five or six miles from the shooting scene at 2 a. m. today, and was brought to Macon this afternoon on a murder warrant sworn to by Will Darley, father of the dead girl, according to the Treutlen county sheriff.

The sheriff said the youth told him the shooting of the girl, with a .22 rifle, was accidental. He quoted witnesses as saying the youth told the girl he was going to kill her, and that the boy said: "Watch her fall."

She died almost instantly, the sheriff said, of a bullet wound in the back of the head.

The Calhoun and Darley families, both farmers and well known in the county, according to the sheriff, live about one-half mile apart.

Funeral services for the dead child will be held at Midway church, near the scene of her death, at 10 a. m. tomorrow.

WORMS DEADLY

Phosphorescent Objects Kill Quickly.

BERKELEY, Cal., Feb. 23.—(AP) The tiny glow worm, responsible for beautiful phosphorescent displays in the ocean, was exposed today as a master poisoner.

A study by Professor Charles A. Kofoid, University of California zoologist, revealed the worm produces "one of the quickest acting destroyers of human life yet discovered."

It is a protozoic or simple-celled creature technically known as gonyaulax, upon which mussels feed.

Eating a mussel which has fed upon gonyluax generally means swift and certain death. The unlucky human is paralyzed quickly. There is no known remedy.

Sudden death which overtook persons eating mussels from certain California coast regions began puzzling health authorities years ago. Restrictions on mussel-gathering because of this mysterious lethal substance followed.

Professor Kofoid's study disclosed the poisoning periods coincided with the appearance of the phosphorescent worms. Scientists tested the protozoa and extracted a sample of the poison.

The university said the discovery would permit health authorities to issue timely warnings whenever the protozoa approach the mussel areas.

The tiny worm caused a great luminous display off southern California in 1906 during which hundreds of tons of creatures living at the ocean bottom were cast up dead.

Eighteen End Lives Over Gypsy Melody

BUDAPEST, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Eighteen suicides attributed to one song—(not the "Music Goes' Round and Around"), convinced Budapest police tonight that the song menaces the welfare of Hungary and must not be played.

This decision was reached when police received a letter from the 18th suicide Joseph Keller, a shoemaker, asking them to put on his grave the 100 roses mentioned in the song, titled "Gloomy Sunday." The words are by Ladislaus Javor and the music by Rudolph Seress.

Victims of the song include all ages and classes and members of both sexes. Two shot themselves while listening to gypsies draw the melancholy tune from their violins. Others hanged, poisoned or gassed themselves — some while their gramaphones were reproducing the canned version.

Two maids smashed furniture and ruined paintings and tapestry before killing themselves while their employers played the song.

Police appealed to musicians to suppress the song.

REPUBLICANS URGED TO GET PRESS AGENT

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Will Irwin, distinguished international journalist, suggested to the republican party today that it forget temporarily its search for a presidential candidate and concentrate on finding a good press agent.

"I think the press agent would probably be more important in the coming campaign," he said. "We are subject in this country to the most astonishing reversals of public opinion and we may now be on the verge of a great landslide against the New Deal. If we are, any candidate can beat Roosevelt, and if we aren't no one can beat him."

Irwin, suggested a model. He raised Charles Michelson, democratic party's publicity chief, and said he thought the republicans would do well to follow his example.

MELTON ENDORSED FOR LEGION HEAD

16 Florida Posts Seek National Commandership for Georgian.

SANFORD, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—The fourth district conference of the American Legion, comprising 16 posts in north and central Florida, by unanimous vote today indorsed Quimby Melton, publisher of the Griffin, Ga., Daily News, for national commander.

A resolution adopted without dissent said Melton "has demonstrated by his conduct and long period of unselfish service to the American Legion that he not only is thoroughly imbued with the spirit of true Americanism but is a stanch upholder of the principles of the great organization."

Florida delegates to the next convention were urged to "put their wholehearted effort and support into his election."

Melton addressed a luncheon session, speaking in favor of rehabilitation for veterans and pensions for widows and orphans of World War soldiers.

He advocated deportation for aliens who show no inclination to become citizens of the United States, declaring 4,000,000 of them were employed and holding positions Americans should have.

Chester Danner, of Daytona Beach, was elected district commander, succeeding Carl Taylor, of Jacksonville; Taylor and G. L. Killan, of Jacksonville were named delegates to the national convention, with Lloyd Boyle, of Sanford, and Bill Comer, of Orlando, selected as alternates. Bill Shepard, of Sanford, Kelly Wilds, of Fernandina, and Comer were elected to the executive committee.

Mrs. Betty McClure, of Apopka, presided at a session of the auxiliary.

Have the Time of Your Life at PARAMOUNT'S BEST PICTURES OF THE MONTH...!!!

"You're the Top", sings Ethel Merman to Bing Crosby, "even with those bushy whiskers."

Get a Kick Out of "ANYTHING GOES"! BING CROSBY, ETHEL MERMAN and CHARLIE RUGGLES are the stars who helped make the biggest musical stage hit in years into a bigger, handsomer, funnier screen show!... Paramount built up the thrilling dance ensembles and gorgeous production scenes. Coralled 100 of Hollywood's loveliest lasses. Took on a howling new cargo of laughs. A hilarious whoop of delight, under the direction of Lewis Milestone.

Bing and Ethel sing "I Get a Kick Out of You", "You're the Top" and "Anything Goes" from the original Cole Porter score . . . and we added a flock of new hits by Hollywood's top song writers. Listen for "My Heart and I", "Moonburn" and "Sailor Beware"...

On the left we have stars Marlene Dietrich and Gary Cooper discussing the proper interpretation for the love scene on the right, with Director Frank ("Farewell to Arms") Borzage...

And the crowd roared!... Here's Harold kicking up his heels in glee over finding Dorothy Wilson in his arms on return from a knockout round of hilarious adventures among the leather-pushers.

Thrill to "DESIRE"!... The sweethearts of "Morocco", two-fisted GARY COOPER and glamorous MARLENE DIETRICH, meet head-on and hearts aflutter in a story of love, laughter and larceny on the Spanish Riviera—and how the love-sparks fly! The grand cast includes John Halliday and Ernest Cossart. If you crave romance—this is IT!

Three of the devastating Travis Banton creations which you'll see Marlene wear in "DESIRE". A trig little two-piece afternoon frock with polka-dot waist and solid-color skirt... An alluring informal dinner hat... And an exotic negligee which combines white fox and white chiffon.

Laugh at "THE MILKY WAY"!... Take HAROLD LLOYD as a Grade D milkman with a yen for the prize ring. Add a laugh-a-second plot adapted from the stage riot that had New York hanging on the ropes. Then add a knockout cast—Adolphe Menjou, Verree Teasdale, Helen Mack and Dorothy Wilson, for instance. Have Director Leo ("Ruggles of Red Gap") McCarey mix it up, and what have you got?—A feast of fun that will set you roaring till the cows come home!

if it's a PARAMOUNT PICTURE it's the best show in town . . .

DR. BROUGHTON RITES HELD AT TABERNACLE

Final Services Planned Today in Greenwood Cemetery at Knoxville.

Final rites for Dr. Len G. Broughton, noted Baptist minister and founder of the Baptist Tabernacle here, will be held this afternoon at Knoxville, Tenn., upon arrival there at Greenwood cemetery.

The body will be taken to Knoxville by Awtry & Lowndes and Dr. W. H. Knight and members of the family will accompany the funeral cortege.

Funeral services here were held at 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon at the Baptist Tabernacle. The officiating ministers were Dr. Knight, Dr. Ellis A. Fuller and Dr. Louie D. Newton. Members of the Atlanta Baptist Ministers' Association served as honorary escorts.

The funeral party will leave Atlanta at 7 o'clock this morning and arrival at Greenwood cemetery is expected at approximately 2 o'clock in the afternoon.

Dr. Broughton died at his residence, 1019 West Peachtree street, N. E., following an illness of several weeks. The Baptist Tabernacle which he founded was the largest institutional Baptist church in the south.

For half a century he had served his church with distinction which brought him world-wide acclaim. He has served as guest minister in practically all of the large cities of the nation and has served a half dozen of the leading Baptist churches of the Southern Baptist convention.

For several years he was pastor of the historic Christ church, of London, England.

GREAT BRITAIN TO TRY GERMAN ON SPY COUNT

Middle-Aged Lawyer-Writer Expected To Face Court Tuesday.

LONDON, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Visits to army flying fields, mysterious letters, a cipher code and activities of an attractive, ravenhaired young woman furnish the background for the approaching spy trial at Old Bailey of Dr. Hermann Gortz, middle-aged German lawyer-writer.

Twice postponed, the Gortz case is listed for the calendar of Old Bailey sessions beginning Tuesday but it may be several days before the trial will start.

It will be the first spy trial in England since 1933, when Lieutenant Norman Baillie-Stewart, of the Seaforth highlanders, went to prison after a court-martial decided his relations with a mysterious "Marie Louise" in Berlin constituted betrayal of official secrets.

Specifically, Gortz, arrested at Harwich November 8, when he stepped off a cross-channel steamer from a short visit to Germany, faces two charges of violating the official secrets act, the snag which trips up spies in the British Isles.

Air Secrets Sought.

The prosecution, at Gortz' preliminary hearing in Margate police court, charged attempts by the doctor, aided by pretty dark-haired Marianne Emig, to learn the secrets of Britain's revivified air force.

For four weeks, the prosecution alleged, Gortz and Marianne, with the former riding behind on the pillion seat, went from airdrome to airdrome by motorcycle sketching and taking notes.

The attractive Marianne, according to testimony at the police court hearing, in addition did first-hand missionary work with Air-craftsman Kenneth Lewis, young soldier then attached to the Lee-on-Solent R. A. F. camp.

Marianne did not return to England with Gortz and thus escaped arrest.

Met Girl on Roadside.

Lewis testified he met her, a riot of color in claret-colored riding trousers, white scarf, green sweater and white motorcyclist's helmet, while he was tinkering with a disabled motorcycle along a country road. She introduced herself, he said, and then invited him to tea at the Broadstairs cottage she and Gortz occupied.

Marianne, first described as Gortz's niece and then only as his secretary, asked Lewis, he said, to send her some photographs of R. A. F. planes and landing fields. Then, he testified, during the course of a week she offered to pay for the developing and printing of any photographs he took of army planes and finally offered to help with the expense of a holiday trip in Germany.

Lewis turned down the vacation offer, he said, but he mailed pictures of airplanes, an airview of a flying field and some newspaper clippings to Marianne at a Berlin hotel. None of the exhibits constituted secret information, he explained, for all of the pictures could be bought at any picture shop.

REV. J. A. HADLEY DIES AT RESIDENCE

Negro Minister Was Leader in A. M. E. Church for 50 Years.

The Rev. J. A. Hadley, noted Methodist Episcopal negro minister, presiding elder of the Athens district and for more than 15 years president of the board of trustees of the Holmes Institute, died Friday night at his home here at the age of 68.

The Rev. Hadley was active as a minister for more than 50 years. He was a member of the Sunday school board, of Nashville, Tenn., and held that office at the time of his death.

The Fashions

and they come back here!

For 68 years we have watched the transition.

From bustles and furbelows to boyish styles and knee-length skirts, and back to graceful lines and rich fabrics again . . . we've pursued a constant ideal of quality.

We are never disturbed by cycles . . . Dame Fashion may be as fickle as April weather, but our constancy is as steadfast and adamant as the ancient law of the Medes and Persians . . . a never ending and relentless quest for beauty and quality.

RICH'S

Blue Monday Finds Sally Forth Soliloquizing Over This and That

By Sally Forth.

THE NUMBER "eighteen" has figured conspicuously in Tommie Hudson's young life ever since she was born on January 18, 1918, in Decatur. It was on January 18, 1936, that she celebrated her eighteenth birthday date at the party planned by her mother, Clever Mrs. Guy Hudson. Eighteen guests were invited at 7:18 o'clock and refreshments were served at 11:18 o'clock.

Tommy was born in the year when the United States was involved in the World War, and her birthday anniversary was commemorated in the after-depression era. Brown paper covered one half of the table to represent the ground, upon which was placed a miniature railroad station, from which floated the United States flag. A miniature train, automobile, ship and airplane denoted the method by which soldiers were transported to the war.

The other half of the table bore decorations that were suggestive of 1936 in that it was overlaid with a handsome lace cloth and silver candlesticks held white tapers. A symmetrical miniature garden adorned the center and was made by Mrs. Hudson, who is an ardent horticulturist and understands the language of flowers. Little dollies dressed in party clothes strolled on the garden walks. Nine individual cakes intended for the boys were embossed in the national flag, and the nine given the girls were decorated with the dove of peace.

AFTER the appalling number of weddings last fall a great many ladies keenly interested in such matters, were heard to cluck, shake their heads maternally, and say "My dear, all the eligible men seem to be marrying off. Who will be left for the 1936 debutantes to marry?"

Judging by recent events, Atlanta's eligibles are numerous, for one deb has joined the ranks of the married, another announced her betrothal yesterday; a third is busily monogramming sheets, and two others go about looking mysterious and starry-eyed.

FLORENCE HANCOCK, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Hancock, of Cartersville, who often visits here, is having the time of her life in Miami. "Flossie," as she is better known to her friends, was among the popular "out-of-towners" who assisted in entertaining at Judy Beer's debut last fall. Flossie and Judy have been friends for many years, and they often exchange visits.

Flossie writes her Atlanta friends that Miami is "Paradise Lost without the 'Lost'", which means supposedly, that Miami is quite a heavenly place. Flossie had just been to a water show at one of the most prominent hotels there, and she was highly impressed with the number and variety of celebreties present.

In the box next to theirs were Nancy Carroll, the actress, and Quentin Reynolds, the editor of a popular weekly magazine. Both of these are flaming red-heads, and the alarming contrast in his heighth and her diminutiveness created a most attractive picture. In the box by Miss Carroll and Mr. Reynolds was seated none other than Postmaster-General Farley, who looked, according to Flossie, "exactly like his pictures." Buddy Rogers was also in the group present, and "he was so good-looking, and the feminine heart beat so loud, that no one could hear what the announcer announced."

But to cap the climax, who should be seated on the other side but the Prince and Princess Salandi, of Denmark; Johnny Reynolds, the noted golfer, and William Howe, editor of a New York newspaper, who is also affiliated with a very prominent columnist.

Another interesting experience that Flossie enjoyed there recently was attending the French Casino supper theater, a recent innovation which is enjoying much popularity due to its unique qualities. As one dines, a picture show, requiring an hour and a half to unreel, is shown to entertain the patrons. Strange to relate, all the actors and actresses are foreign talent, and there isn't a word of dialogue, for the shows are patterened seomewhat along the line sof the old-fashioned silent screen versions.

Mardi Gras Party Will Be Given.

The Italian American Club, of Atlanta will sponsor an informal Mardi Gras party on Tuesday at the Knights of Columbus hall, 1200 Peachtree street. Friends of the Italian American Club are invited and masks may be secured at the hall. A floor show will be presented at 8 o'clock.

There will be favors, prizes and surprises, card games and dancing and refreshments.

Mrs. Sam A. Cefalu is in charge of decorations and management of the party, and Vincent P. Cefalu is chairman of the entertainment committee. Children taking part in the floor show are among the best entertainers in the city.

Dr. and Mrs. Rhodes Give Buffet Supper.

A delightful event of last evening was the buffet supper given by Dr. and Mrs. C. A. Rhodes on the occasion of Mr. Rhodes' birthday at their home on Brighton road. This is the first of a series of parties to be given by the hosts, who were assisted in entertaining by their daughter, Miss Ellen Rhodes.

The home was attractively decorated to carry out a color scheme of red and white, the lace-covered serving table being centered with a silver basket of red roses and white narcissi. Silver candelabra containing lighted red tapers completed the artistic arrangement. Guests included a number of friends of the hosts.

Miss Sara Roberts Weds Rev. James

Interest centers in the announcement made today of the marriage of Miss Sara Ida Roberts to Rev. William James, of Birmingham, Ala., the ceremony having been performed on February 21 at the home of Mrs. C. C. Foster, on Claire drive, in the presence of close friends and relatives. The marriage vows were taken before an improvised altar of palms and flowers. Mrs. J. Wilmot Jackson, of Roswell, played several selections of bridal music on the piano and the ceremony was read by the Rev. Peter Marshall.

The bride entered with her sister, Mrs. Lat L. Lyon, of Roswell, who acted as matron of honor. They were met at the altar by the groom and his best man, Rev. John Dixon. Mrs. Lyon was becomingly gowned in a fashionable model of blue crepe trimmed with a darker shade of blue and with matching accessories. She wore a corsage of roses and valley lilies.

The bride's wedding ensemble of dark blue woolen featured a three-quarter length coat with a blue-gray collar of fox. Her blouse of gray crepe blending with the fur. Her hat was of matching blue silk and straw with a short veil. She completed her costume with matching purse and gloves and wore a spray of orchids and valley lilies.

After the ceremony Mrs. Foster and Miss Margaret Foster entertained the wedding guests at a reception at their home, after which the bride and groom left for their wedding trip to Florida. Mrs. James is the youngest daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Martin Roberts, of Roswell, Mrs. Roberts having been before her marriage Miss Nancy Turley. Mrs. James' sisters are Mrs. John Foster, Mrs. Henry C. Wing, Mrs. William Bowden Jr. and Mrs. Lat L. Lyon, of Roswell.

She received her education in the public school at Roswell, later graduating from Washington Seminary, where she was a charter member of the Sigma Delta Club. She attended Oglethorpe University and was prominent in college activities, being a member of the Kappa Delta sorority.

Reverend James is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Edward James, of Montclair, N. J. He was born in London, England, received his education at the Bluecoat Academy in Devonshire, after which his family moved to the United States. Here he furthered his education, graduating from the Columbia Theological Seminary in Decatur and is now pastor of the Fairfield-Highlands and Wylam Presbyterian churches in suburban Birmingham. After the wedding trip Mr. and Mrs. James will reside in Birmingham.

My Day

By ELEANOR ROOSEVELT

NEW YORK CITY.—Here I am back in New York, but this time not on a very cheerful errand.

Even if a loss in a friend's family is not your own personal loss, you cannot help realizing what it means for them to lose a link which has been the center of a family chain.

Years ago I remember a friend saying to me that one of the hard things about growing older was the passing of what—to you—had been the older generation. Suddenly, you were standing out in front with no one to fall back on to give you a sense of security. We all must meet this, however, and there is always the joy of welcoming new youth to wipe out our sadness.

I went over and spent a while this morning with my new grandbaby and her mother. Is there anything more exquisite than the softness of a wee baby's skin?

Unfortunately, her sister, Sarah, has had a cold, and so has not been able to see the new baby. I stopped and bought Sarah a toy and went in to tell her that I had seen Mummy and little Kate.

Sarah said, "I have heard about my sister but I haven't seen her yet."

I wonder when she does if there won't be just a little bit of jealousy, for the newest one always occupies the center of the stage for a time, at least.

This was a very family day—for my daughter and I had lunch together and soon found ourselves discussing many personal things.

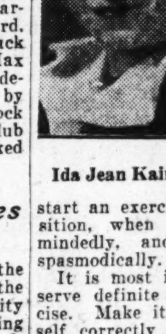
'YOUR FIGURE, MADAME!'

By IDA JEAN KAIN.

EXERCISE WITH CORRECT POSTURE.

To improve your figure, correct your posture. Exercise taken in a slumped position is as ineffectual as a stroke of golf from a poor stance. A figure fault that can be corrected by exercise is in itself a sign that you do not care for exercise. But... you are going to exercise!



Ida Jean Kain.

In making this concession to your figure, you may think that any position will do, as long as you exercise. That is where you are in error. You waste your time when you start an exercise from the wrong position, when you exercise absent-mindedly, and when you exercise spasmodically.

It is most important that you observe definite posture rules in exercise. Make it a point to hold yourself correctly in the performance of every movement connected with an exercise. Not only does this increase the benefits of the exercise, but the muscles are strengthened for the maintenance of good posture at all times. As you exercise, keep these rules in mind:

1—Hold your head well up, not poked forward. Snuggling down into your coat collar increases the tendency to carry the head and neck forward. Correct head posture will help you to counteract this habit.

2—Shoulders are important in your exercise. They should be held back; never rigid or hunched up. Raised shoulders increase tension and interfere with freedom of motion.

3—Chest up does not mean chest out . . . the chest should be held well up. In this position a pull is exerted on the lower abdominal wall, and its important trunk muscles are strengthened.

Before attempting the performance of an exercise, study your posture faults. Then, when you use the exercise, correct posture will come more naturally. However, treat your figure as a unit. Thinking of separate figure segments is apt to result in rigidity.

Just a word about the dosage of exercise . . . How much should you take? Well, overdoing at the beginning is the end of most exercise programs, so it is better to err on the side of too little rather than too much. Plan to begin with the more simple exercises and progress to the more strenuous ones, gradually increasing time and vigor of your program, and giving attention to correct posture with every set.

Of course, you must constantly check your posture if you are to develop beautiful carriage, but in corrective exercise good posture is linked with proper position, which is always stated at the beginning of an exercise. Make every minute of exercise count toward figure loveliness.

GEORGE SARGENT SHOOTS FINE 67 ON NO. 2 COURSE

Weekly Dogfite at East Lake Produces 'Hot' Golf Play.

East Lake's golfers, those competing in the regular weekly dog fight on the No. 2 course, got "hot" Sunday afternoon and literally "burned" up the course.

George Sargent, veteran professional, carded a magnificent 67, five strokes under par, in a warm-up for the Masters' Invitation tournament early in April at Augusta, to set the pace.

And Sargent's spectacular, sub-par round was good enough only for third place, so blistering was the pace being set by the foursomes in general.

Travis Johnson, J. C. Kyle, W. H. Calhoun and John Murray with a 124, 18 strokes or a birdie for every hole, won first prize. And there were no "gimmies" for those weekly dog fights are all the name implies and plenty of competition. No putts are conceded, until after the hole has been won or lost.

Cliff Eley, T. L. Johnson, William Johnson and P. F. O'Brien, with 129, won second place.

George Sargent, R. K. Whittier, J. J. Nicholson and W. P. Branch, with 130, 12 strokes under par, finished in third place.

R. J. Kirkpatrick, George Rudolph, P. W. Crawford and L. E. Mock won fourth prize with a 133.

K. A. Stevenson carded an eagle two on the 440-yard par 4 11th hole on the No. 2 course, for the most spectacular shot of the afternoon.

Sargent's card:

Par out	.....543-444-435—36
Sargent	.....444-434-524—34
Par in	.....444-534-534—36-36—72
Sargent	.....444-424-434—33-34—67

Not only was the East Lake course well patronized, but all the other private and municipal courses recorded the best play of the Sunday's thus far this year.

Charlie Yates and Julius Hughes were unable to carry on their 500-hole marathon match, due to Yates being ill with a severe cold.

M'AVOY, GREEN MEET TUESDAY

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Two persistent challengers for light heavyweight and welterweight honors—Jock McAvoy, of England, and Cleto Locatelli, of Italy—top this week's national boxing program.

McAvoy, matched to meet John Henry Lewis for the light heavyweight title here March 13, collides with Anson Green, of Philadelphia, in a 10-rounder at Philadelphia Tuesday, while Locatelli, an outstanding contender for Barney Ross' welterweight crown, tackles Tony Catalino, of Providence, R. I., in another 10-rounder at Jersey City Tuesday.

MISS PAT BERG PLAYS TUESDAY

ORMOND BEACH, Fla., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Patty Berg, 18-year-old sensation of the winter links, heads entries in the annual South Atlantic women's golf tournament opening here Tuesday.

Out to regain the form that carried her to two consecutive victories before she was conquered in the finals of the Palm Beach event last week, the Minneapolis high school girl will compete in a field ranking as one of the best of the season.

Only Mrs. Maureen Orcutt Crews, of Miami, victor over Patty at Palm Beach, and Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, of Philadelphia, the national champion, of the more famous golfing tourists are missing.

STREET FLOOR

DAVISON-PAXON CO.

George Sargent went around the par 72 "new" course at East Lake yesterday in a 67.

The veteran professional is tuning up his game for the Masters' tournament at Augusta.

Sargent won the open championship in 1909 at Englewood with a great 290. Shooting a 290 in the open competition is something.

Sargent retired years ago to give the more valuable contribution of teaching. Yet, he will, I am sure, finish ahead of some of the pop-eyed youngsters at Augusta in the Masters. And they have been playing practically every day and practicing three and four hours daily.

GEORGE SARGENT.

Atlanta is particularly fortunate in having a splendid array of golf professionals and none is more popular than the East Lake teacher.

Bobby Jones, who was instrumental in bringing Sargent to East Lake, holds the record at East Lake for both courses. A 64 has been made on the "new course" but not in competition. Jones twice had a 66 on the No. 2, or "new" course.

Jones, incidentally, has been turning in scores just as low as those produced by the winter professionals in Florida. This means relatively little except that it does prove Jones still can score with the best of them.

But to meet competition in a tournament such as the Masters, Jones would have to devote three or four hours daily to practice. This, he will not do. There is no reason why he should. He dominated golf as no one else ever has, or will. And he now is engaged in other things. Golf is his recreation. Nothing else.

LITTLE TO COMPETE.

Lawson Little, twice national amateur champion, will be one of the competitors at Augusta in April. He was low amateur there last year, shooting a 288, par for the 72 holes.

It was this tournament which Little credited with putting him right for his victory in the amateur at Cleveland when he won from Walter Emery in a stirring final round.

It will be interesting to watch Little in competition with the professional field, a field which he has never been able to match as yet.

BASKETBALL RETURNS.

Basketball, in one smashing season, has a large segment of our population speaking in unknown tongues.

Our town sees hysterical mobs watching the southern amateur tournament at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

In Athens, 4,000 customers all but lift the roof as they watch the finals of the Georgia-Georgia Tech series with the latter team winning in a fast finish.

The pendulum has swung back. After several years of more or less mild interest in the game, the populace is packing the gymnasiums all over the state in high school, college and other amateur contests.

Roy Mundorff's Georgia Techs, a sophomore team, moves on this week to Knoxville where the Southeastern tournament is to be played.

The Georgia Techs have proved something of a sensation this winter. Roy Mundorff, always a capable coach, has some material and his team demonstrates what a coach can do with material which can soak up instruction.

The team may do almost anything at Knoxville. It may win the tournament in slashing, expert fashion. Or it may fall a victim to the well-known and terrible disease known as sophomore jitters.

Basketball's return to popular favor is just one of those things. And not so difficult to understand. More teams are playing. They are good teams. More teams mean more spectators.

Next winter, when the city auditorium is restored, we should bring the Southeastern tournament back to Atlanta and have them hanging from the rafters once more. They used to do that—especially when Tech and Georgia were playing.

THE POINT GETTER.

Information comes in on a young basketball star who might decorate some college team with success. Howard Cook, playing with Palmer-Stone High school, in one of those fervid district tournaments, scored 72 points in four games.

This was but three points shy of the total points made against his team in the four games. In other words, Cook heaved the ball through the net practically as many times as did 20 other players opposing him.

He did this on two courts, the tournament being played at Zebulon and Centralhatchee. He scored 22 points in the first game at Zebulon and 21 points the next evening. At Centralhatchee, they were wise to him and put two guards on him but he got 17 points and the next evening eluded two more guards for 12 points.

In 19 games this season, he has averaged 15 points per game. He will be seen in the state tournament at Athens this week. If this isn't the high school record, it will do until the record is discovered.

THE LOOSEST MONEY.

Sporting money is the loosest money in the world.

More than $1,000,000 was wagered on the eight hoss races run at the Santa Anita track last Saturday when Top Row won the handicap, valued at $104,000.

The Miami tracks are witnessing heavy wagering with the state getting a large income.

The hoss players all die broke, according to an old saying. But while they live, they certainly keep the money fresh.

Santa Anita probably is the most beautiful hoss track in the world, sitting as it does at the feet of the Sierra Nevada mountains. The movie people give it a great play. On opening day little more than a year ago, I recall watching the crowd. At least half the spectators had their backs to the race track and were watching the movie stars in their boxes.

Canadian Fighter Succumbs to Injury

TORONTO, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Fred Matthews, Arntifield, Que., heavyweight boxer who was injured in a tournament here Wednesday, died late Saturday night.

An inquest will be held after a pathologist's report, probably in about ten days. Cause of death has not been ascertained but there were indications of a cerebral hemorrhage.

Pat Flanagan, knocked Matthews out.

Peter Yon To Keep 'Johnson Dollar'

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Peter Yon, the stonemason who retrieved the silver dollar Walter Johnson pitched across the Rappahannock river, changed his mind today about selling it.

"I need the money," he said. "But some of my friends tell me this dollar is going to be worth a whole lot more than the $100 I am offered. I think I'll keep it for a while."

PURPLES MEET TYPISTS TODAY FOR CITY TITLE

Championship Game Begins at 3 O'Clock on Y. M. C. A. Court.

By Roy White.

Commercial High and Boys' High will battle at 3 o'clock this afternoon on the Y. M. C. A. court for the city prep basketball championship. Today's game was moved up from Tuesday in the semi-final round of the Big Eight schedule.

Commercial High recently won its first north Georgia interscholastic conference championship, and is now trailing the Purples by half a game for city honors.

Boys' High, with a new inexperienced team, has come along strong and a victory this afternoon will give either team the city title.

Both teams have beaten Tech High twice and both have broken even with G. M. A. in two games.

WON FIRST TILT.

Boys' High defeated Commercial in the first game between the two and since Commercial has overcome all obstacles in winning the N. G. I. C., which also included Fulton, North Fulton, Decatur and Druid Hills, today's game will mean the city title.

It will be the last scheduled prep game of the year, as Tech High, Boys' High and G. M. A. are entered in the annual G. I. A. A. championship tournament Thursday, Friday and Saturday night in Macon.

ONE MORE GAME.

Another round of the city league is scheduled for Friday afternoon, but with tournament play in progress and the Monroe Aggies already having won the Big Eight championship, no more prep games are to be played here this year except the Columbus-Tech High game here Tuesday afternoon.

Monroe Aggies have won eight straights and lost none for its best season in recent years. It was Red Barron's first basketball championship in the Big Eight schedule. Boys' High holds second place, with Columbus Industrial in third place. Commercial holds fourth place.

Following today's game Atlanta's prep teams, with the exception of the Smithies, will take it easy until Thursday, when Tech High, Boys' High, Commercial and G. M. A. open play in the Macon tournament.

VENZKE DENIES FIRING MENTOR

NEW YORK, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Gene Venzke, his handsome face marked by the strain of the fastest 1,500 meter race ever run indoors, barely had regained his breath before he started asking angry questions.

"Who quoted me as saying I had dropped 'Robbie' as my running coach?" the University of Pennsylvania flyer demanded after winning the feature race of the National A. A. U. championships in Madison Square last night.

By 'Robbie" he meant Lawson Robertson, famous long-time coach of Penn runners and United States Olympians. Venzke had admitted last week that he had returned to the training system he had practiced four years ago, before he went to college.

"Even if I am training as I did in 1932 that wouldn't mean Robbie would be out," Venzke said. "Robbie might not agree with my method. To infer otherwise was a bad error, that's all. It was a hell of a thing of say. I wonder what Billy Morris thought?"

Venzke's resentment on behalf of Morris, his most active instructor, and Robertson crowded out of his mind the realization that he had just run 1,500 meters in 1:49.9 for a new world record, and that he had defeated his former jinx, Glenn Cunningham for the third successive time.

"It was the fastest pace I ever followed," the young collegian said. "I didn't try to pass him until the stretch. I was counting on that long straightaway to the tape. I feel fine except for a burning throat. That smoky air got to me."

Hank Leiber Named Coach at Arizona U.

TUCSON, Ariz., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Director of Athletics J. F. McKale at the University of Arizona said tonight Henry (Hank) Leiber, holdout outfielder of the New York Giants, has been appointed head baseball coach at the institution and will report for duty tomorrow morning.

Director McKale declined to quote Leiber in connection with a reported conversation that the hefty batting ace was through with the Giants, contenting himself with the declaration "Hank assured me tonight he will report in the morning."

Leiber said at Phoenix recently he was not satisfied with the New York contract.

Tech Plays Tennessee In Knoxville Tonight

Flying Jackets Get Opportunity To Acquaint Themselves With 'Tournament Floor.'

By Jack Troy.

Those Tech Jackets will get some practice tonight on the home court of the Tennessee Volunteers, where the conference tournament will be played this week-end.

The Jackets leave by train early this morning. It is a return game, Coach Roy Mundorff's five having defeated the Vols, 33 to 30, early in the season. The game has no bearing on the tourney race, the contending teams having already been chosen.

The Gold and White squad will return to Atlanta Tuesday morning and get in a couple of days' practice before returning to Knoxville.

The Tennessee game, which is the final one of the regular season for Tech, works out very well. It gives the Jackets a chance to become partially accustomed to the floor and baskets in Jefferson hall, the tourney site.

JACKETS' GREAT DRIVE.

The fans will be talking for some time to come of Tech's great drive to insure a bid to the conference tournament.

Starting with two wins and four losses, the Jackets won five games in a row. They defeated Sewanee twice, Florida, Auburn and Georgia. Having gained needed experience, the Jackets should go to Knoxville as a fine tournament team. They are just now reaching their peak.

Ben Jones, of Canton, who led Tech to victory over Georgia in Saturday night's wild-eyed battle, is an outstanding forward. Ed Jones and Bill Jordan are other fine forwards.

GOOD CENTERS.

Bo Johnston and Whack Hyder are very capable centers, and Burtz Boulware, Culver Kidd and Fletcher Sims are excellent guards.

Rival coaches have called the Jacket material the best they have seen in years. They were speaking of 10 men, not just five. The team started slowly because of the presence of so many sophomores and has developed with experience.

WISE DECISION.

Coach Roy Mundorff said he thought the committee's decision to invite 10 teams to the tournament "is fine" just so long as we don't have to play two games on the opening day."

In view of the closeness of the race, Coach Mundorff thought the committee had acted wisely.

"I have no idea how we will go in tournament play," Mundorff added. "All I can say is we will fight just as hard once in it as we did to get in it."

The Constitution Urged 10 Teams

The Constitution alone advocated the advisability of 10 teams being selected to participate in the Southeastern conference tournament this week-end at Knoxville.

The Constitution took cognizance of the closeness of the race and the fact that 10 fine teams deserved a bid. A poll of league directors voted the increase yesterday. Selection of eight teams would have done a great injustice to a couple of teams that rightfully should have been voted in.

J. P. C. Scores Eighteenth Win At Birmingham

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Feb. 23.—A crippled, but smooth-working J. P. C. cage machine from Atlanta defeated Birmingham Y. M. H. A. in a fast battle here tonight, 38-27. It was the 18th straight victory for the invaders and their second of the season over Y. M. H. A. The win was achieved without the services of Steve Browdy, former star center of the local team, and Ginsberg, regular forward. Browdy has an injured eye; Ginsberg is slightly ill.

Playing on the small Y. M. H. A. court, contact was close and play rough at times. H. Katz, of the visiting Progressives, fouled out in the first six minutes of play, and Pony Minsk joined him later via the same route, as did Applebaum, of the Birmingham team. Ben Chapman, New York Yankee outfielder, refereed the game.

J. P. C. led at half-time, 22-13, and Y. M. H. A. launched a strong drive after the intermission but inability to sink the foul shots counted heavily against them.

Shep Lauter, coach of the unbeaten Atlanta team, announced that Steve Browdy would be able to start at center for his club as it opposed Warren in the finals of the Southern Invitational tournament in Atlanta tomorrow night and that Ginsberg would be ready for the call at forward.

ALLEN, CONKLIN TO BOX TONIGHT

Frankie Allen and Chester Conklin meet in a feature eight-round boxing match tonight at the new arena, Ellis and Piedmont. There will be a double main event, both of eight rounds.

In the second feature, Wild T. Hubert battles Kid Coleman.

Two six-round slugfests will bring together Slugger White and Honey Boy Green and Glenn Lawson and Bennie Moone.

One other match will be added to the program by Promoters Roby and Bettis.

The 30-round program which begins at 8:30.

Tech Draws Auburn In Tourney Opener

It was learned on reliable authority last night that Georgia Tech will meet Auburn in the opening round of the Southeastern Conference basketball tournament at Knoxville.

Tech, the report says, will meet Auburn on Friday afternoon and the winner will take on Vanderbilt, conference leader, Friday night.

Just why it is that Tech, having played a very representative schedule, is included in the teams that must double up, remains a matter of question. It would seem that the teams having played lighter schedules would be drawn for the extra duty roles.

No Team To Sub For Mississippi

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Colonel Paul B. Parker, athletic director at the University of Tennessee and member of the Southeastern conference basketball tournament committee, said tonight he had not been informed of the withdrawal of the University of Mississippi from the tournament to be held here.

"If Ole Miss decides to withdraw its team there is nothing the committee can do about bringing in another team," Colonel Parker said. "The teams were selected by the conference."

The team drawing Ole Miss in the first round will be declared the winner by default if Ole Miss fails to show up, Colonel Parker said.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Ten teams were selected today to compete for the southeastern conference basketball championship in the annual tournament starting at the University of Tennessee next Friday afternoon.

Those chosen were Vanderbilt, Kentucky, Alabama, Tennessee, Mississippi State, University of Mississippi, Auburn, Georgia, Georgia Tech and Louisiana State University.

In a last-minute move the tournament committee obtained authority from the conference to increase representation from eight to 10 teams.

"There were four teams with approximately equal percentage and appeared from their season's records to be about equal in strength, so we got conference authority to increase the entry list to 10 teams," Colonel Paul B. Parker, Tennessee Athletic director and member of the tournament committee, explained.

Florida, Tulane, and Sewanee are the schools left out of the tournament.

Pairings for the tournament will not be made until tomorrow.

Parker said basketball coaches of the conference voted Vanderbilt, Kentucky, Alabama and Tennessee, in the order named, as the leading teams of the loop.

"Mississippi State, Ole Miss, L. S. U. came next," he said, "while Tech, Auburn and Georgia were tied in the voting."

"Before the committee reached a decision," Parker added, "it went over percentages and scoring and reduced teams of the conference to a numerical average, one down to 13. It took the strong teams and the weak teams and averaged those. There were three teams practically tied, so we decided it

J.P.C. Meets Warren for Title Tonight

BITTER CONTEST, BIG CROWD SEEN FOR A. A. C. GYM

Progressives Seem To Hold Slight Edge, If There Is an Edge.

By Jack Troy.

Survivors of a great field of 14 teams, the Jewish Progressive Club's "iron men" and Warren Company tonight will battle for the championship of the second annual southern invitational basketball tournament at the Atlanta Athletic Club.

The way is cleared for a new champion, since a surprising Warren team Saturday night eliminated the Y. M. C. A. Triangles, defending champions.

Shep Lauter's Progressives, who have won 18 straight games this season, departed early yesterday morning for Birmingham, where they defeated the Y. M. H. A. team of that city last night.

IN BIRMINGHAM.

The Progressives spent the night in Birmingham and will return to Atlanta this afternoon. And so, with comparatively little rest, the "iron men" will go out tonight with no other purpose in mind than cudgeling the Warren team into submission.

It should rank as the greatest game of an outstanding tournament. Starting time is 8:30.

Warren Company has advanced to the finals on the great play of Bill Perkins, Fred Bradford, Witcher, Gene Warlick and Bellamy. Bradford and Witcher are great forwards, Perkins is a former All-Southern center for Tech and Warlick and Bellamy form a strong guard combination. Bradford is an outstanding floor man.

FINE GUARDS.

The Progressives will offer the greatest guard of the tournament in Gabby Greenberg, who is an exceptionally fine defensive player and a point-getter as well.

They have four good forwards—Morris and Hyman Katz, Happy Ginsberg and Izzy Friedland—a fine center in Steve Browdy and a dazzling pair of guards in Greenberg and Pony Minsk.

To enter the finals, Warren defeated Spindale, a strong combination from North Carolina, 43 to 41; Ken-Rad, highly favored five from Owensboro, Ky., 58 to 34, and the "Y" Triangles, 47 to 45.

BY THIS ROUTE.

The Progressives marched to the finals by turning back West Huntsville, Ala., 50 to 41; Parks-Chambers, 48 to 30, and Oglethorpe, 36 to 33.

You bet your money and take your choice in such a game as tonight's. If there is any edge, it is a slight one and belongs to the Progressives.

At any rate, the best idea is to get there early and grab a seat. There won't be nearly enough room to accommodate the crowd.

Generals Unbeaten In S. C. Cage Race

RICHMOND, Va., Feb. 23.—(AP) Southern conference basketball teams will meet in seven contests this week which will serve as final drills under fire before the annual tournament at Raleigh next week-end.

The standing of the teams underwent little change last week with only three games played between conference members. N. C. State picked up a couple of victories on a trip to South Carolina and Clemson campuses while North Carolina's Phantoms nosed out Duke by a two-point margin.

Washington and Lee continues to hold the lead in the conference race with eight victories and no defeats.

Tom Kearney, Betting Commissioner, Passes

ST. LOUIS, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Tom Kearney, 65, nationally-known betting commissioner, died today after a two-week illness. Death was caused by pneumonia which developed after a paralytic stroke induced by a kidney ailment.

Kearney was known to the sporting fraternity from coast to coast as the man who handled millions of dollars in wagers and never "welched" on a bet.

In 1924 he lost $74,000 when Black Gold won the Kentucky Derby. Most operators of future books on the race were ruined financially; many failed to pay off on their bets; Kearney paid his.

"That hurt," he said afterward, "but I decided there was nothing to do but pay off. It was the smartest decision I ever made. Everybody in the country heard about it and from then on I really had a reputation."

Born in St. Louis, he was a newsboy and a steel mill worker in his youth. In 1892, when he was 22, he opened his first horse-racing handbook and by 1902 was already nationally known among followers of the horses.

In that year, when the late Governor Joseph W. Folk clamped down on horse races and gambling, Kearney moved to New Orleans. The following year he went to Hot Springs, Ark., where he operated the New York Turf Club, a noted gaming house. He returned here in 1906 when Governor Folk's term of office ended.

'Braddock's Gonna Win!' Says Gould, in Atlanta

Champion's Manager, Visiting Here, Keeps Chanting the Old Battle Cry.

By Ralph McGill.

Joe Gould was carving lamb chops and talking:

"Jimmy Braddock used to know how to read but I think he has forgot how. He doesn't seem to be worried about all the stuff they are writing about Joe Louis and how Joe Louis will beat Jimmy."

Joe Gould is the smart young manager who stuck with Jimmy Braddock through thick and thin and finally saw him become champion of the world.

He was in Atlanta last night, en route to Columbus, where World's Champion Jimmy Braddock will referee some wrestling matches.

Braddock's Pilot

JOE GOULD.

Before the Baer-Braddock fight Joe Gould was around telling people how Jimmy Braddock would become champion of the world. He told it a thousand times a day—"Braddock's gonna win."

And that night I saw Braddock win and afterwards saw Gould and his new champion in their hotel suites. There was a heart-throbbing night. The dream had come true. The man had bit the dog. The rainbow had a pot of gold at the end of it. Joe Gould was telling us that night how Braddock had fought with a broken rib.

Last night, in Atlanta, he was telling me again:

"Braddock's gonna win. Braddock's gonna win."

He had reasons for it.

"BAER SCARED."

"That Louis hasn't met anyone who wasn't afraid of him. Only two fights mean anything. Carnera and Baer. Carnera was a clown. He doesn't count. Baer was scared.

"When Louis climbs in there and knows that he is up against a man who won't be afraid, that will be a different story.

"What if he should knock Jim down? You know what Jim will do? He will get up off the floor and start punching again. That's what."

There's no gainsaying that. No champion ever had more heart than Champion Jimmy Braddock. He's got a heart about the size of our Georgia watermelons. I am speaking of the heart of courage. As a matter of fact his actual ticker is normal size. But the courage heart is something else. It's large.

FANS LIKE LOUIS.

The fight fans are just as positive today that Joe Louis will win as they were before that Max Baer would win. A Braddock victory over Louis would be no more surprising than was his 15-round verdict over Max Baer, the California playboy.

"They point out that Louis knocked out Baer and that Jimmy went 15 rounds to a decision," said Gould. "Well, what of it? Did Tunney try to knock out Dempsey? Jimmy was winning with a left hand. There was no need to try for anything else.

"He'll fight Louis his own way. And no other way. And he'll win. Braddock's gonna win."

HIS THEME SONG.

That was his theme song. And far be it from me to go to the mat with him. He was right before. His man has the fighting heart of the Irish. He's never been knocked out. He's been good for years. A man doesn't get to be champion without anything.

Gould and his champion don't think Baer should try a come-back. They think he quit in the Louis fight and that he is all washed up.

And they expect the Louis fight to be a fight, a h— of a fight, according to Joe Gould. And they think Braddock may have to get up off the floor to do it. But they think he will. "Braddock's gonna win."

The exhibition tour begins tonight in Columbus. From there they go to Columbia, S. C., and then back along the Atlantic seaboard.

DODSON BEATS HARRY COOPER

Wisconsin Youth Upsets Veteran in St. Petersburg Playoff.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., Feb. 23.—(UP)—Leonard Dodson, of Pembine, Wis., came up from nowhere today to defeat Light Horse Harry Cooper, of Chicago, in the playoff of the $2,00 St. Petersburg open.

Dodson, virtually unknown in tournament play, carded a 72 today—one less than Cooper—to take the title and the first-place purse of $500.

The playoff was necessitated yesterday when Cooper and Dodson finished the regular 72 holes in a tie at 283 strokes.

Cooper, seasoned veteran of golf's tour tournaments, held a lead until the 13th hole. At that point, the Wisconsin unknown cut down his two-stroke lead, took the lead and never was headed.

FRESE FAMILY TAKES HONORS IN SHOOT HERE

Al Junior and Senior Cop Feature Events at West End.

By Clint Davis.

Appearing at the West End Gun Club yesterday, as a sure harbinger of spring, Al Frese Sr., made his annual return more impressive by winning the club's February ham shoot with a score of 50 straight.

In fact, the shoot was an impromptu "Al Frese Day," with young Al Jr. making it a clean sweep by winning the ham in Division 2. A couple of hams is too much meat for any family, but some of Al's friends sugested that he sell them and use the money for obtaining the owl grease that was necessary for his "limbering up."

However, all advance preparations were justifiable as Al Sr. was in his prime yesterday. A dangerous competitor in any shoot, and skeet's greatest clown, his squat was lower than ever and his cigar shorter. In addition to the ham, his 64 straight won the medal offered for the longest amateur run of the day.

Two other runs of 50 or better were scored. Jimmy Calhoun was high in the pro ranks as well as tops with his run of 66 straight. One of his runs was scored with the .410. The writer accounted for the other run of the day when he "lucked" 62 straight.

A competitive team shoot featured the day's program. Addison Smith headed the winning team which was composed of Sam Ham, C. L. Talley, Ralph Minehan, Harry Harkins and Lyman Smith. This team scored a total of 262x300 and was pushed very close by Ike Duke's team which finished with a total of 260. Members of this team were J. C. Calhoun, R. E. Vibberts, J. L. Franklin, Al Frese Jr. and M. E. Harkins.

A team headed by the writer also shot, and was composed of Al Frese Sr., Captain M. E. Hicks, Luther McDonald, H. L. White and E. D. Smith Sr. Their total was 241.

In the ladies' division, Mrs. J. C. Ellis and Mary Baldwin ended all square 39x50 each. The program was handled by regular club officials which included Forrest and Ike Duke.

Plains Will Hold Second Cage Meet

PLAINS, Ga., Feb. 23.—For the second consecutive year Plains, Ga., is playing host to the Amateur Independent Basketball Teams of southwest Georgia during the week of March 9-16. Last year 16 of the best teams of this section met in the Gold Medal Tournament and after a week of furious play, the Albany Blues carried off the honors.

This was the first tournament of this kind for this section and so much interest was shown that the sponsors decided to make it an annual event. Already enough interest has been manifested to insure its success, but it is desired that every independent basketball team from nearby vicinities be given a chance to participate.

Sixty-one prizes are offered to team managers and players who enter.

Whitehead, Lynch Win 4-Ball Title

CORAL GABLES, Fla., Feb 23. (AP)—Charles Whitehead, of South River, N. J., and Art Lynch, of Mamaroneck, N. Y., won for the second straight year the Miami Biltmore amateur four-ball golf tournament today with a 7 and 6 victory over Henry Russell and Ralph Stewart, Coral Gables schoolboys.

Held even to the morning turn in the 36-hole finals, Whitehead and Lynch had a 4-up lead at noon and won handily.

They had increased their lead to eight holes at the 27th, lost the 28th, and halved the next two to close out the match.

The hometown lads were unable to maintain their subpar pace that eliminated the medalists, Howard Tyron, of Elmira, N. Y., and Jack Ryerson, of Cooperstown, N. Y., in yesterday's semi-finals.

TOP ROW, BOUGHT FOR $3,500, NETS OWNER $218,670

Giant Killer Has Chance To Pass Sun Beau's $376,744 Total.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Top Row, claimed for a paltry $3,500, is the handicap king today.

A. A. (Bert) Baroni's wiry brown giant-killer won the Santa Anita handicap yesterday and collected a prize of $104,600.

Last year Top Row won $102,545. His collections this year before the handicap amounted to $4,025. In addition to the $104,600 plum, Top Row won $7,500 bonus money for his trainer, also Baroni.

To date the horse he bought for a song has rendered in return a complete score to the tune of $218,670.

The turf's "biggest little" horse, winner by half a length over Time Supply and a full length over Rosemont, turned back a field of America's best handicap horses in the Saturday classic. Back in seventh place, was Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Great Discovery, the 1935 handicap king. He's the ex-champion at this moment.

IN SPOTLIGHT.

Today the spotlight is trained on Top Row, the little son of Peanuts by Too High. Baroni claimed him for $3,500 a little over two years ago and has made a fortune out of him since.

Baroni, of Reno, Nev., sportsman, would like to see Top Row beat the all-time high money mark of W. S. Kilmer's great Sun Beau, which retired a couple of years ago with $376,744 total winnings.

It could be done. The Baroni star, a hardy, rough and ready campaigner despite his comparative undersize, is only five years old and as sound as the dollars he wins.

The big handicap victory meant added fame and added money for Jockey Wayne Wright. He was believed to have collected $10,000 as a percentage of Top Row's win, and $1,750 bonus money from the track.

FORESAW VICTORY.

"I thought I had won before the race started," the 20-year-old Rexburg, Idaho, rider said. "I knew I was riding a champion.

"We got a bad start. I believe we were next to last going around the first turn. We started to move up at the seven-eighths pole. I knew it was all over when I let him go and he squirted away as if he was shot from a cannon.

"The only horse I feared was Time Supply."

Wright was called before the stewards after the race in connection with a foul claimed by Jockey Tommy Luther on Time Supply.

Luther protested that Top Row moved over on him in the stretch. His claim was disallowed.

"There was no foul," said Wright, dismisisng the matter abruptly.

But his rival declared he was "sure Time Supply would have won if he had not met with interference from Top Row."

The Aaronean quintet, seven times champion of the Alliance league, virtually clinched its eighth straight championship Sunday, trouncing the Nordau outfit, 26-20.

The pace-setters are undefeated in the league this year while the Nordaus, highly rated to win the title, have suffered two defeats, both at the hands of the Aaroneans.

In the other games, the Davideans nosed out the Herzlittes, 34-28, while the S. I. J. defeated the Strausseans, 27 to 17.

TECH, GEORGIA IN S. E. C. MEET wouldn't have been fair to have eliminated the last two."

SEVEN FRIDAY.

Seven games will be played Friday, the first starting at 2:30 p. m. It means that two teams will have to play twice, once in the afternoon and once at night. The four victors of preliminary rounds will clash in the semi-finals Saturday night. The finals are slated for Monday night, March 2.

This is the third tournament since the conference was organized in 1932. Last year there was no tournament and Louisiana State and Kentucky tied for the championship under the percentage system.

Local interest in the tournament is high. Parker said he expected a sell-out. The gymnasium seats 3,000 persons.

Meeting with Parker were H. G. Crisp, Alabama basketball coach and member of the committee, and Rex Enright, Georgia basketball coach, who represented H. J. Stegman, committee member who was unable to attend.

Ole Miss Remains Out of S. E. C. Meet.

UNIVERSITY, Miss., Feb. 23.—(AP) The University of Mississippi basketball team will not enter the Southeastern conference cage tournament in Knoxville February 27-29, Athletic Director Ed Walker announced today, explaining that his team was too badly weakened by the recent influenza epidemic at the school to have any hope of winning.

"Our boys are in such poor physical condition from the flu, that there isn't a chance of getting them back in good shape in the short time available," he said.

A 20-game season ended for the Ole Miss cagers with a 40-30 defeat here Saturday night at the hands of Mississippi State College. The Red and Blue won 11 of the 20, and seven of 12 conference engagements. The University of Mississippi won three out of four from L. S. U., swept a two-game series at Tulane, broke even in two tilts with Alabama, halved a pair with State College at Starkville, and lost both games with State here Friday and Saturday.

Wrestle Royal Billed For Fans Here Tuesday

A royal wrestling card, including a wrestle royal, will be presented Tuesday night at the Atlanta theater by Matchmaker Henry Weber.

While the wrestle royal, an old-fashioned battle royal except that all participants must wrestle rather than fight, is not the feature of the show, it is creating much more interest than the main event.

The main event will introduce Leo Numa and Dory Roche, both well known here. They'll meet in a finish match, best two out of three falls.

Participants in the wrestle royal will include Paul Jones, the hook scissor exponent; Rudy Strongberg, the giant German; George Maseur, the Syrian champ; Jack Kennedy, 220-pound star from Chicago, and Ernie Zeller, former Indiana football star.

These five wrestlers will total more than 1,100 pounds.

The wrestle royal has been tried with much success in various parts of the country, and Matchmaker Weber believes Atlanta fans will see a great program.

DAILY SHORT STORY

EVEN CHANCE

Young Dr. Clarke Had to Make the Most Difficult Decision of His Medical Career.

BY CRAIG RICE.

"But," said young Dr. Tom Clarke earnestly, "in the meantime, the child will die."

Old Judge Graham shook his head helplessly and stared out the window.

"Sure of that, Tom?"

"As sure as I am of anything. Oh, Dr. Allison advises against the operation. But I know he's wrong. I know——"

"Tom, what are Kitten's chances of getting well without it?"

"About one in ten."

"And if you operate?"

"I'd say even chances. Of course, Dr. Allison——"

"Leave him out of it," said the judge. "I'm satisfied with your judgment. If Kitten were my child, if I had the say so, I'd tell you to go ahead. But as it is I can't say anything. I can't even advise you."

The young doctor stared at him helplessly for a minute.

"Judge, isn't there any chance of reaching Kitten's parents?"

Judge Graham shook his head. "I've tried everything. They're motoring somewhere in the south of France,

"It Was More Than Kitten's Life."

completely out of reach. No one knows where they've gone." The old judge spoke with a sudden burst of bitterness. "If ever two people deserved a child less——"

"They're young—and thoughtless," said the doctor.

"Worse than that. I've known them both, since they were Kitten's age. They're weak, dishonest good-for-nothings. Kitten would be better off without them. There's good blood on both sides of her family, farther back. But to be kept cooped up in boarding schools! I'd like to have her out on my place, with a pony to ride, and a puppy to play with, and Martha to look after her." The judge frowned heavily.

"About the operation——" the doctor began hesitatingly.

"According to law," said the judge a little ponderously, "if both Kitten's parents were dead, I'd be her legal guardian. As it is, I have absolutely nothing to say about it. Kitten hasn't another relative in the world to give you the authority. Her parents can't be reached. So if you operate, you do it on your own responsibility."

"And if I do?"

"If you do, and Kitten doesn't get well, her mother is just the kind of woman who would raise the devil with you, from pure meanness. You can figure what the resulting mess would do to your career."

"Yes, judge, I'll have to decide it for myself." The young doctor rose to go.

"Yes, you will," said the judge soberly, adding under his breath, "and God help you!"

"How are you, Kitten?" asked Dr. Clarke of his youngest patient, half-an-hour later.

"Fine, Dr. Tom." It was hardly more than a whisper. Little pink fingers curled tight around a lean, brown hand. "Going to tell me a story?"

"Not today, Kitten. I just came in to see how you are."

"I'm getting worse, Dr. Tom. I heard the night nurse when she thought I was asleep. She said I was getting worse all the time."

"She said that!" Dr. Clarke's eyes blazed blue fire.

"But I'm not afraid. I'm not afraid a bit."

"Sure, Kitten?"

"Not when you're taking care of me, Dr. Tom. Then I'm not afraid." Two huge brown eyes looked steadily up at the young doctor with an expression of infinite trust. "I know you'll make me get all well again."

Dr. Clarke rose to his feet, bent over and kissed the small white forehead. He had made up his mind. Bidding Kitten good-by, he strode out into the hospital corridor where the day nurse waited anxiously at the door.

"Miss Dale, I'm going to operate. Immediately."

Young Dr. Clarke never liked to look back at those terrible hours, after the had passed. It was more than Kitten's life . . . and the little girl had come to mean a great deal to him in her days at the hospital. His own life hung in the balance as well.

And Kitten trusted him. He couldn't deny that trust, even if it meant risking his career and all the years of study and drudgery he had gone through.

If Kitten didn't pull through—well, he would cease to be the successful young Dr Clarke. But he didn't dare think of that.

Those were long, terrible hours, spent in the little hospital room after the operation. The young doctor grew haggard and pale from lack of sleep. The face of the day nurse grew white and drawn with anxiety. Together they watched the little figure on the bed, listening for every breath, every heartbeat.

But the slight, uneven breathing kept on, and slowly it grew steadier and stronger, and finally the brown eyes opened and tried to smile.

It was several hours later when the young doctor, staggering with exhaustion, prepared to go home and rest. But first there was a visitor to see him. He made his way downstairs to the anteroom.

The visitor was Judge Graham, who rose from his chair by the window as Dr. Clarke entered.

"Well, Tom?"

The judge, too, looked strained and weary.

"It's all right, judge. Kitten's going to get well."

"I knew she would. Here, you'd better sit down. You're all in."

The young doctor sank into a chair. "I knew I took a terrible chance. But I had to do it. It was the only way."

Judge Graham shook his head. "You didn't take a chance, Tom."

"What? What do you mean?"

The older man fumbled in his pocket, at last drew out a folded cablegram. He started to hand it to the doctor, then unfolded it and stared at it reflectively.

"Things work out in a funny way in this world, Tom. You didn't take such a chance when you operated on Kitten. I've been her guardian since Tuesday." He paused and passed the cablegram to the young doctor. "There was a motor smash in the Pyrenees last Tuesday. Kitten's an orphan now. And I'm her guardian."

Tomorrow: "F. O. B. China," by Virginia Cheatham, is the amusing account of an unnecessary abduction.

Grid Captain Would Be Mayor

JONESBORO, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP) If plans of Football Captain William Sabin work out, this oldest town in the state will have the youngest mayor.

Sabin, who is co-captain of the State Teachers College at Johnson City, announced today as a candidate for mayor in the April election. He did it "partly for fun, but mostly in seriousness."

His platform included these sturdy planks:

Establish a Young Men's Christian Association here.

Get Jonesboro into organized professional baseball.

Cut the tax rate and raise the water rate.

To inquires about how he would combine the careers of mayor and student he said, "I'll be a night mayor." He added gravely that the duties of mayor are not onerous.

The present mayor is E. E. Hacker, who is expected to seek re-election.

Discussing his qualifications for the position he seeks, young Sabin, who has specialized in economics, said "I think I have learned enough in school to make me a good man for the job."

National Dog Stakes Get Under Way Today

GRAND JUNCTION, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP)—Champion bird dogs, fresh from successful campaigns in field trials throughout the United States and Canada, were held in readiness today for the 41st running of the historic national championship stake opening tomorrow.

From all sections of the country sportsmen arrived with their blue-blooded pointers and setters to place them in competition for the title won last year by Homewood Flirtatious, rugged female pointer owned by H. M. Curry, of Pittsburgh.

With the title will go a cash award of $1,500 and a leg on the coveted Robert W. Bingham trophy which requires three victories in the national for permanent possession.

On the Air Today

PETER PAN—Freddie Bartholomew will be heard in an air version of Sir James M. Barrie's "Peter Pan" as the Radio Theater's presentation over WGST at 8 o'clock tonight.

In the past "Peter Pan" has always been played by a girl, and a memorable performance was that of Maude Adams given in 1905.

Freddie, who came to this country from England last year, has been chosen for the air role of Peter, and this makes his first full-length radio program.

LA ARGENTINA—Carnival festivities with music played by Eduardo Armanis' orchestra from Buenos Aires will be heard over WGST at 11:05 o'clock tonight.

It is mid-summer at this time of year, below the equator and such a carnival takes place each year. The entire population participates with dancing seen everywhere. This is something novel in radio entertainment and should be a pleasing period of diversion.

HISTORIAN SPEAKS—Charles A. Beard, historian and author of New Melford, Conn., will be the principal speaker on the first of two broadcasts from the meeting of the National Education Association to be held in St. Louis and heard over WGST at 9:45 o'clock tonight.

Loctfast Asphalt Shingles in Growing Demand, Chas. N. Walker Reports

SUPERIOR QUALITY SPURS POPULARITY

High-Class of Dependable Workmanship Guiding Principle of Roofer.

Quality is not an accident!

The quality of its featured Loctfast asphalt shingles and other roofing materials, and the quality of workmanship maintained by the Charles N. Walker Roofing Company, 141-143 Houston street, N. E., during the more than 27 years of its service to home and building owners are facts borne out by increased demands for both in recent months.

"The Loctfast individual asphalt shingle," says Mr. Walker, "is the result of high intention, sincere effort, intelligent and skillful execution; it represents the determination to produce a serviceable and beautiful design to be laid over old, wooden shingles or on new roofs. In its creation, quality has been combined with beauty in a variety of colors."

Loctfast shingles, it is said, harmonize with any style of architecture because of their hexagon (keystone) shape. The locking feature is not visible, and holds them securely, insuring tight, rainproof roofs. They are produced in a number of colors: red, green, blue-black and the beautiful tapestry blend.

Each Loctfast shingle has two nails on the side and two nails at the top, all being concealed and thus not exposed to the weather. Each is "locked fast" on both sides and at the bottom corners so securely that they cannot be lifted by strong winds or curled by the sun's rays. Intense rain and sleet, it is pointed out, cannot be driven beneath them because of the secure locking feature, which holds them with equal snugness over old shingles or to a new roof surface.

"These shingles—Loctfast—are approved by fire insurance underwriters," Mr. Walker points out, "and are free from ignition from sparks which cause so many roof fires. New and distinctive, they will make an old home look new, and our method of applying them over old shingles removes all anxiety of disfiguring the home, shrubbery or lawn."

In addition to the Loctfast, Mr. Walker states his company, with an equally determined eye to quality, provides the popular Tru-Lok shingle and other high-grade roofing materials.

This policy of providing quality materials as well as quality workmanship, Mr. Walker asserts, is largely responsible for the fact the company, during its more than a quarter of a century of service, has won and maintained the continuing patronage of a large number of satisfied customers.

Some idea of the increasing demand for the Loctfast shingle, the Charles N. Walker Roofing Company's featured product, is reflected in Mr. Walker's statement that during the year to date the company's business has been double that of the same period of last year.

Mr. Walker states that during the past year a large number of old and large property holders have turned to his company for their roofing needs—a further evidence of confidence in its reliability and the quality of its workmanship and materials.

In addition to roofing, the Charles N. Walker Roofing Company maintains a fully staffed and completely equipped engineering force for air-conditioning, in charge of Charles N. Walker Jr., son of the company's founder. The younger Mr. Walker has undergone thorough training for this work, and his staff includes capable men whose experience dates back to the birth of air-conditioning.

The commercial type Aga stove has proved to be the center of attraction in this beautiful model kitchen display in the second floor of the Wright Company's headquarters at 101 Cone street. Hotel men and other institutional executives throughout the south are invited to visit and inspect this complete showing of kitchen equipment and appliances.

The model kitchen recently set up by the Wright Company, hotel and restaurant outfitters, in the second floor of its 101 Cone street headquarters, is attracting increased interest among hotel and institutional executives—particularly its crowning piece of equipment, the commercial type Aga stove.

Of those who attended the recent convention of the Georgia Hotel Association here, a large number found so much of interest in the Wright Company's All-Southern Hotel Exposition exhibit in the Ansley hotel that they forthwith visited the Wright Company's headquarters and inspected its complete model kitchen. Here they found a complete installation of ever-up-to-the-minute kitchen appliance and cookery need, from cutlery to stove.

The model kitchen, however, lays special stress on the Aga stove, which many hotel executives have declared to be the finest equipment of its kind on the market.

Emphasis is placed on the economy feature of the Aga stove, the manufacturers asserting a half ton of coal is sufficient to operate it continuously at capacity for a month. Thus, with the Atlanta price on this type of coal quoted at $17 a ton, the Aga, it is said, may be operated at full efficiency at approximately $8.50 a month.

"The principles of heat accumulation and storage embodied in the Aga," says Max Wright, head of the company bearing his name, "are accentuated in the large model especially designed for restaurants, hotels, clubs, schools, large estates and institutions where rapid cooking and wide variety of menu are essential.

"By maintaining steady and continuous combustion and storing the heat thus generated, the Aga stove, when being used for cooking, draws its heat not only from the burning coal, but also from the reservoir in which heat has been stored up in the periods when cooking is not being done. The Aga is heavily insulated. Little of the heat escapes to make the kitchen uncomfortable. Thus, the heat is conserved for the actual cooking process. Furthermore, the surface plates and ovens are always maintained at cooking temperatures, and there is no need to wait for the stove to heat up at any hour of the day or night."

In the commercial type Aga stove, it is pointed out, there are two fire boxes, which provide two exceedingly hot surface plates, in addition to which the large surface area maintains a simmering temperature for slower cooking. The Aga also has two ovens, so designed that one is exceedingly fast, with amazing uniformity of temperature. The other oven is purposely maintained at a low temperature. This slow cooking oven is a distinct feature of the Aga stove, for it provides a space where cooking may be done over night, or foods prepared by the slow transfer of heat, which in many cases adds materially to the quality and flavor of the cooking.

The Aga range is produced by the Aga Stove Company, of Elizabeth, N. J. The Wright Company's model kitchen, a veritable masterpiece of compactness and completeness, as well as of potential efficiency, features many other names equally as well known in the field of kitchen science—names such as Champion, the American Metalware Company, the Wear-Ever Aluminum Company, Detroit-Garland, Readco, South Bend Range Company and the Wright Company itself.

In this connection, attention is directed to the fact that Wright Company maintains its own manufacturing plant in Atlanta, where it produces a great many different types of equipment, such as dish tables, sinks, urn stands, chef's tables, pantry tables, plate warmers, baker's tables and other wood and metal top tables.

The model kitchen display includes a great many of the most recent developments in kitchen science, some of them up-to-the-minute perfections of erstwhile less efficient equipment. Here are to be seen coffee urns and complete steam table by the American Metalware Company, hot plate equipment by South Bend, a hotel size Super-Cold refrigerator, steamer by Wear-Ever, mixer by Readco, deep-fat fryer by Detroit-Garland, meat block and chef's wood-top table by the Michigan Maple Block Company, potato-peeler by Blakeslee, and other equipment too numerous to name.

In addition to kitchen equipment of every type known, the Wright Company carries in its huge stock every necessary equipment and supply for restaurants and hotels, including china, glass and silverware, complete bars and bar fixtures, furniture, etc. Hotel and institutional executives are invited to visit or communicate with the Wright Company when in need of new equipment, or when contemplating replacement of the old. They are especially invited to visit and inspect the company's model kitchen display and to investigate the innumerable time, labor and money-saving appliances shown there.

Sig Guthman Views Postal Receipts As Barometer of Business Advances

The significance of the growing postal receipts shown recently by the Atlanta postoffice was pointed out Saturday by Sig Guthman, president of the Atlanta Envelope Company.

"It always delights me," said Mr. Guthman, "to see postal receipts climbing, because it means so much. Postal receipts are a very sensitive index to business. When things slack off, mail volume falls off. There are fewer things to write letters about, fewer big promotion pieces being mailed, and fewer packages going out. So postal receipts quickly show the condition.

"Of recent months, the postoffice gains have delighted me, therefore, not only because it means business picking up, but also because increased mailings mean that more people are needing more envelopes. And that, of course, is important to our business."

The Atlanta Envelope Company was founded in 1895 and has grown rapidly, until today it is serving the entire south, with a long list of customers, many of whom have dealt with this one concern without interruption for long years. The plant at 505-709-11 Stewart avenue has a capacity of nearly a million envelopes a day, and makes it a practice to assure customers of fresh envelopes by manufacturing to order.

"That practice," Mr. Guthman explains, "insures a flap that will stick when you lick it, and stay stuck until it gets there. Making up envelopes in reserve and letting them dry out on a shelf means that they will not give satisfactory service. Our great capacity permits us to handle each order quickly and make deliveries as though the envelopes were right there in stock when the order came in."

BREMAN PREDICTS GAINS IN BUILDING

Iron and Metal Company Receives New Shipment of Structural Steels.

The Breman Iron & Metal Company, 329 Decatur street, S. E., has just received an extra large shipment of reconditioned I-beams and other structural steel in a variety of sizes, according to M. L. Breman, sole owner, and is prepared to meet daily increasing demands from contractors.

January, Mr. Breman asserts, was the biggest business month in seven or eight years in the sale of structural steel, and indications are that, with a great deal of new construction already under way, the spring will witness a major upward surge in building activity.

With this in mind, the Breman Iron & Metal Company, catering to individual builders as well as to commercial contractors, has steadily increased its stocks and its service until it now is in position to fulfill virtually any structural steel requirement and at the same time to give the contractor the benefit of unusually low costs.

The Breman Iron & Metal Company, during its nearly a half-century of service to builders, has specialized in quantity dealings in scrap metal, and in recent years has expanded its service to include all types of structural steel, including I-beams, angle irons, reinforced rods, etc. These stocks include both new and thoroughly reconditioned structural materials of the highest grade.

Mr. Breman takes particular pride in the company's nearly five decades of dealings with construction men and its maintenance, during that time, of a strict policy of high quality, fair dealing, low prices and prompt and efficient service. The company's clients, it is said, include many hundreds who have found by experience that they get full value for the money expended, backed up by a record of guaranteed satisfaction. They know that the materials they buy from the Breman Iron & Metal Company are purchased at the lowest possible cost—frequently lower than can be obtained elsewhere.

The Breman Iron & Metal Company, in addition to structural steel, is prepared to supply the contractor's needs for pipe in any desired quantity. It also carries in stock at all times an unusually large stock and variety of second-hand lavatories and sinks, and is wholesale dealer for all types of plumbing supplies.

Builders not already conversant with the services rendered by the Breman Iron & Metal Company are invited to communicate their needs to Mr. Breman, who will be glad to supply estimates upon request, without obligation.

During the night the giant flying boat had to fight adverse conditions but the last part of its long over-water journey was favored by good weather. The clipper left San Francisco yesterday afternoon.

Baxter Maddox Agency Leads in Southeast In Connecticut Mutual Gains During 1935

Baxter Maddox, general agent; H. M. Holderness, vice president, of Hartford, Conn.; Miss Carrie Lee Waddell, Clay W. Penick, supervisor; Mrs. Alec Acree, Nicholas Andronovitch, B. L. Hollis, of Crawfordville, and M. L. Harper. Back row, seated, left to right: Mrs. Dan Thurston, Mrs. Emalene Neilson, Mrs. Paul Fraser, Paul Byrley, Miss Eloise Slaton, cashier; Sim Walton, Mrs. Carlton Lee, Albert Erwin Jr. and Mrs. Albert Erwin Jr. Front row, seated, left to right: Mrs. Paul Byrley, Luther Guest, assistant cashier; Miss Martha Ridley, Ed Gurr, Mrs. Nicholas Andronovitch, Lawson Kiser, Miss Ruth Stillwell, Dr. Carlton Lee, Mrs. Clay Penick and A. V. Neilson.

The Baxter Maddox Agency of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company led the entire southeastern division of the company in 1935 in percentage of increase in paid-for business, compared with 1934, it was disclosed last week.

In appreciation of this accomplishment, Harold M. Holderness, vice president of Connecticut Mutual, represented the company at a dinner given last Thursday night at the Piedmont Driving Club, at which time he presented a beautiful silver loving cup to the agency in recognition of its record.

During his address before the agents, Mr. Holderness stated the company's life insurance sales for the year 1935 were $97,000,000, registering an 18.6 per cent increase over those for 1934, and its insurance in force increased more than $21,000,000, reaching a total of $914,000,000. The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company's assets, he stated, showed a remarkable increase of more than $22,000,000 during 1935, reaching a new peak of $268,000,000. During the six "depression years," he pointed out, or since December, 1929, the assets of the Connecticut Mutual have increased $81,000,000.

The year 1935, Mr. Maddox asserted, was the best the company has ever experienced in Georgia, showing a 32 per cent increase in paid-for life insurance over 1934.

"With January and February well ahead of last year to date," he stated, "we anticipate an even brighter future during the remainder of 1936. The retirement income contract, guaranteeing future financial independence, still leads in public favor."

With this in mind, Mr. Maddox states he contemplates expanding his agency, both in Atlanta and throughout the state, and has openings at present for three or four additional representatives of the right type, with whom he invites interview.

Discussing last year's remarkable agency record, Mr. Maddox paid particular tribute to B. L. Hollis, of Crawfordville, who led the entire personnel, and to Mrs. Emalene Neilson, of Atlanta, who ran a close second for leadership honors. Paul Frazer and Nicholas Andronovitch, both of Atlanta, and George Bell, of Tignall, completed the year tied for third place among the leaders.

These and the following other representatives of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company in Georgia attended the presentation dinner with their wives and others: M. L. Harper, Lawson Kiser, Ed Gurr, Miss Carrie Lee Waddell, Albert Erwin Jr., Paul Byrley, Edgar Strauss, George Weyman, G. F. Willis Jr., Clay Penick and S. B. Walton, all of Atlanta, and Dan Thurston, of Jackson.

In connection with his agency's record for 1935 and for the year to date, Mr. Maddox states he is confident a large representation from his agency will win the trip to the Connecticut Mutual's annual convention, to be held at The Homestead, in Hot Springs, Va., in June. Announcement also already has been made that the 1937 convention will be held in Del Monte, Cal., and plans are under way to make it probably the greatest in the company's history.

The Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company, it is pointed out, is celebrating its 91st year. It is considered one of the outstanding life insurance companies of the country, with a remarkable history and traditions of conservative management it continues to enjoy the goodwill of the public.

This year's volume to date, Mr. Maddox states, has not been attained without hard work and close co-operation among members of the agency. Clay Penick, newly-appointed agency supervisor, has held a number of sales meetings with agents and, through his many years of experience in life insurance underwriting, has brought much assistance to the agents.

In this connection, it is stated, Edwin S. Hewitt, of the educational division of the Connecticut Mutual, will spend this week in the city, supervising an educational program designed to assist the agency's agents in underwriting principles. He will discuss the various educational courses offered by the company, together with the new and unique visualized selling aids, and the new direct-mail material. He will be available at any time for conferences with the agents and others and to assist them in life insurance problems.

Drennon & Zahn, Inc., Head Warns Of Minor Causes of Auto Accidents

Harry S. Boling, Champion of Safety, Urges Correction of Ills.

Sudden death, studding the records of auto accidents, knows no season, according to Harry S. Boling, president of Drennon & Zahn, Inc., "and it's a mighty permanent thing," he adds.

Schooled by many years of dealing with accident causes, Mr. Boling knows whereof he speaks.

"Death doesn't always ride at the wheel," he says. "Sometimes it rides a broken spring, sometimes the radiator, and even rides, at times, a faulty windshield wiper. 'Fenders, Springs and Other Things'—that's the Drennon & Zahn, Inc., motto, by the way—are much too often the precarious seats in which death roars over the road or the downtown street."

With spring rains nearly here, Mr. Boling, one of the city's firmest advocates of automotive safety, lays particular stress upon the vital need for a periodical check-up on every part of the car.

Mr. Boling is not merely a champion of safety for business' sake. It always has been a subject close to his heart, and with this natural inclination he thus is doubly well equipped to render a thorough service to Atlanta motorists in the correction of automotive ailments which might otherwise lead ultimately to accident or disaster.

Drennon & Zahn, Inc., specializing as it does in "fenders, springs and other things," has long filled a very definite need in the automotive field in Atlanta. Its plant at 449 Marietta street is equipped with every scientifically approved device for the correction of accident causes, and for the repair, adjustment or replacement of faulty structural parts.

With a view to making Drennon & Zahn, Inc., service as thorough-going as is humanly possible, Mr. Boling has gathered about him a staff thoroughly conversant with the functions, faults and maintenance of wheels, springs, fenders, radiators, etc. Each man is an expert in his line, and devotes his attention strictly to that work for which he has been trained. Thus, the motorist patronizing Drennon & Zahn, Inc., is assured always of high quality workmanship, done at reasonable prices.

Mr. Boling, repeating his warning that the winter-spring change is at hand, urges motorists to visit the Drennon & Zahn, Inc., shop and to have their cars checked over thoroughly, so that defects may be remedied and every structural accident cause may be removed before the advent of the spring rains and slippery streets.

JUST NUTS

- MYSTERY HOUSE -

By KATHLEEN NORRIS

INSTALLMENT XXV.

Page was stretched on the warm eastern front of the Rock, half sitting, half reclining, her eyes fixed on the subdued afternoon glitter of the western sea. Beneath her the eternal sea moved majestically against the sheer wall of the island's steep side, split into foam and rushed on toward the shore. Clouds moved across the sky, fog came and went.

Fog was the tragedy; so much fog! Fog smothered the island from dawn until almost noon, and at 3 o'clock the stealthy advances of it put out the sun and crept over the face of the sea, and once again the three castaways were shut into a world of mist and shadow.

Page was no conscious of being hungry any more, but she felt tired and quiet; she wanted only to be quiet. At times savage onslaughts of hunger attacked her, but they did not last now as they had at first. Just now the sun was beating down upon her and she was content; it was good to be warm again. Nights in the cave were cold and dark and endless.

They were all weak, but there was a dreadful pallor about Lynn's weakness, a dreadful languor that told Barnes and herself that he could not long survive. The great gash and the smashed bone on his shoulder was infected; except for the first hour that Barnes and Page had been on the island he had been unconscious and muttering in fever. They had been prisoners here since Thursday. This was Saturday.

Sunrises and sunsets told them of the calendar. Otherwise, Page would have thought the time much longer. There was fres rain water in the hollows of the higher rocks, but there was no food anywhere after the few spoonfuls of old rancid bacon fat had been divided. Barnes and Page had talked at first of gulls' eggs, of shrimp and crab and possibly fish, but they had secured none of them. Rough water was eternally bursting against the face of the Rock. It was far too deep and too rough for either fish or crab; they lurked somewhere in the quieter deeps; no quick turning of a stone revealed then; no search among the rocks and oak-roots at the top of the Rock discovered the hidden nest of a gull.

Sometimes when the fog lifted a little a steamer or two could be seen moving up or down the coast. Barnes' shirt had been fixed to a stick; he and Page had waved it madly whenever there was the faintest hope of being seen. But for most of the time fog had closed that gateway, and had almost obliterated all sight of land from the eastern side of the Rock.

For hours the man and the girl had patrolled that side of their prison. They had shouted, knowing even while they shouted that no human voice could hope to carry above the noise of the waters and the crying of the sea birds. They had strained their eyes in the scanty hours when the shore was visible at all, hoping in vain to see a wandering fisherman on the rocks, or one of the Japanese farmers who, working in the orchard, might walk out to the cliff. The Chinese were apparently gone from Mystery House, or they had been moved to one of the kitchens on the other side of it. No smoke arose from the chimneys on the shore side, and the long line of evergreens that made a lane at the back of the house effectually shut away all sight of the kitchen windows or doors.

Men hunting squibb or abalone never trespassed on the Prendergast estate. There were great signs on the northern and southern boundaries warning fishermen that any intrusion would be severely punished.

Mercifully, that full horror of their position on the Rock had not come to Page at first. For the first few hours she had been concerned only with thoughts of Lynn. Lynn must be moved to safety. Lynn must see a doctor. After that she had been puzzled, and then hungry.

"What about our eating? Do you suppose they're not going to send us anything out to eat?" she had asked, in more surprise than fear. Even Barnes' serious face had no frightened her; her experienced nurse's hands had been able to make Lynn's crushed shoulder more comfortable, and he sleep deeply. That had been all that mattered for a while, to Page. But as the first afternoon had worn away, and twilight had begun to descend upon the Rock and sea, she had weakened a little. "It is horrible to be hungry!" Page had murmured.

Barnes had his pocket lighter; they had built a little fire in the cave. No buns, no coffee, no broilers now. Page had thought, remembering picnics when the gulls had feasted royally after the feast, thinking of the kitchens of Mystery House, with the great joints, the tick steaks, the crisp brown pies all ready for dinner. On the first night on the Rock, she and Barnes had refrained from talking of food; they had disposed themselves as best they could in the little cave, had slept fitfully and coldly.

In the morning hope had arisen. They would catch a fish; they would somehow manage to exist here until the inevitable search was set in motion. Sooner or later Barnes' mother would wonder at his silence. Sooner or later someone would come down to Mysery House, perhaps to find it empty and to wonder, perhaps to look out at the Rock.

Meanwhile she and Barnes hoped and planned. When the fog cleared they might light a signal fire that would be seen far out at sea. When the heavy seas lessened they would try to reach the shore with logs for rafts. Barnes, whenever he could command the necessary energy, worked on the few fallen dead trees that were available, stripping off their boughs with his bare hands, trimming them as best he could for the escape.

"Not now, not while the seas are bursting that way on the rocks—we'd have no chance at all," he said. "But just as soon as they quiet down, we'll get as much start as we can, and push toward the shore."

She must hope and plan, and hope and plan she did, even while her head ached dully from hunger, and every bone in her young body felt racked and sore from the long chilled strain of the nights. When a dull light behind the fog announced dawn she went down to the shore and splashed her face with water and ran her fingers through her roughened hair. Two or three times a day she bathed Lynn's hot face. She had drawn a long strand from her brown sweater. She and Barnes fished patiently with a bent sharpened unbaited bit of wire. But they caught nothing.

"Strange what breaks meals make in a day," Page said once to Barnes. "You never think of them. But a day seems so long without meals; there's so much of it!"

At another time she said, "Do you think a lot of food, Barnes?"

"Of nothing else!" Barnes answered cheerfully.

"Do you think it makes it easier?"

"I don't know. I know I can't help it."

They talked of food. Barnes talked of waffles soaked in hot butter and dripping with hot maple syrup; Page spoke most often of a cold turkey—a cold turkey partly carved and standing on a pantry shelf. Cold biscuits and a cold turkey and hot chocolate!

"I've designed a sort of little revolving pantry, like a bookcase," she said. "No matter where I live I'm going to have it standing close to my bed. It'll have chocolate and nuts and crackers and cans of soup and a little alcohol stove on it, and coffee of course, an instant kind, and cheeses and cold meat and butter, in case I wake up in the night!"

"I was thinking of that," Barnes agreed. "I don't see why anyone ever stops eating."

"It doesn't seem possible anyone ever gets enough. Every one ought to be feeding everyone else all the time," Page said.

They were man and woman, and he loved her. But they had forfotten that, or if Barnes remembered it, it was only to feel in his heart an ache of pity for the lean, courageous, smiling young creature whose cheeks hollowed hour by hour, and whose beautiful eyes grew dazed with exhaustion and hunger. When she climbed back up the rocks from the beach her hand reach for Barnes' hand; sometimes at night she would waken from brief unrestful sleep to find that he had moved her heavy head, to his shoulder.

Now she lay on the sun-washed bracken of the rocks sleepily, idly, staring at the blue sea upon which light was shining at last, and into whose long white blacknessr color and form had come. With the first light she and Barnes had gone about to the eastern face of the rock, had sat there waiting and watching for the faintest sign of life on the shore, that they might begin their calling and signaling. They had lighted a brush fire; the smoke of went straight up into the clear blue air. Surely, surely anyone seeing that fire would sense that some one was in trouble, out on the rock! They would realize that picnickers would not be there so early in this season. No matter how unfriendly the townsfolk in Halfmoon bay might be to the strange inmates of Mystery House they might begin to wonder, if by day and by night fire and smoke showed out on the Rock Island.

Barnes came to join her, throwing himself down on the sparse chapparral and falling as she had into a daydream that was part weakness and part hunger and silent largely because they had said so many things to each other so many times.

"Lynn asleep?" he presently said.

"Yes." Page looked away and he saw her eyes filled with tears. "It isn't hurting him so much now," she said. "He'll just sleep, that way until he doesn't wake up!"

"He's got a lot more strength than you think, Page."

"I know. But nobody could fight that."

There was another silence. After awhile Page broke it.

"They'll find us some day, and the grill, and the blanket, and think that we picnicked here, and that our boat was carried away."

"Listen, that's no way to talk! We'll get out of this."

"Well, I think we will. But if we don't. Do you suppose they've all gone away from Mystery House?"

"I think so. They probably got right out. Probably they'll split; they won't want to be identified. The old woman will go east and live somewhere; Harwood will go back to China—"

"I've thought it all out," Page said in a long silence. "Mrs. Prendergast probably was ill, perhaps dying and perhaps not, and Trudy Mockbee was thinking about the money. Flora came on to join her mother, and either the mother had a plan to kill the old lady or they thought of it together. I think Mrs. Prendergast—I mean my Mrs. Prendergast!—did it alone! She promised Flora money and Europe and everything poor Flora's been starving for, if she would keep her mouth shut. And of course she is Flora's mother. Any woman would stand by her mother.

The DEBUNKER

By John Harvey Furbay, Ph.D.

The globes of our earth, as sold in our stores, lead us to an erroneous conception of the shape of the earth, which is not round like a sphere at all, but is elliptical—that is, flattened at the two poles. This flattening is probably due to centrifugal force, accompanying the revolution of the earth on its axis. The earth lacks 27 miles of having as long a radius at the poles as it does at the equator. The shape of the earth is constantly changing, and the position of the axis itself varies about 50 feet from time to time at the poles.

UNCLE RAY'S CORNER

VISITS IN CALIFORNIA.

VI—Sutter and Sacramento.

Visitors to Sacramento—California's capital city—are likely to hear about a man who was named Sutter, and they may be shown cannons which were used to guard Sutter's fort almost a century ago.

John Augustus Sutter was born in a German city in the year 1803. When he reached the age of 16, his parents took him to Switzerland. There he served in the army for a few years, then went into business. After failing in business and becoming "bankrupt," he left Switzerland to try his fortunes in the New World. From New York he went to New Mexico, then to Alaska and at last to California.

California was under the rule of Mexico at that time. Sutter took out papers to become a Mexican citizen, and was granted a large tract of land in central California. There he built a fort, "to guard against Indians," and began to raise crops and to care for livestock.

Sutter's plan was to form a Swiss colony, and he called his place "New Helvetia." Other persons, however, usually spoke of it as Sutter's fort. The fort had adobe walls "three feet thick and 18 feet high." One thousand acres of land outside the fort were used for growing wheat, and there were cattle roaming the hills. A flour mill was employed for grinding grain.

One day one of Sutter's helpers found some bits of yellow metal in the water of a stream where a sawmill had been put up. The man took the metal to Sutter, and after they made tests they decided it must be gold.

It was really gold. Sutter tried to keep the discovery a secret, but it leaked out, and it brought on the gold rush of 1849. Thousands and thousands of persons from far places came to the spot as quickly as their mules or ox-carts or sailing vessels would carry them. There were gold-seekers even from Hawaii and far China.

Of course most of the gold-seekers did not make fortunes, but there were rich deposits in the Sacramento valley and elsewhere in California. Little villages grew up around Sutter's fort, and in the course of time they were combined in what became the city of Sacramento.

Sacramento today is in the midst of a section of fine farms, where fruit and vegetables are raised, also poultry. The present population of Sacramento is about 100,000.

TARZAN AND THE LEOPARD MEN No. 49
By Edgar Rice Burroughs

Leaving his weapons for Orando's protection, Tarzan hastened to determine the meaning of that lone shot in the wilderness. Aside from curiosity, considerations of his own welfare required that he investigate all unusual events in this mystic jungle.

. . . But he was too far away to give assistance to the two whites, who fought bravely but ineffectively against the superior foes. Old Timer was quickly subdued; and The Kid, after firing one shot, was hurled to the ground and pinioned by the Leopard Men.

Quickly the excited, gibbering victors attached ropes to the necks and arms of the captives and prepared to lead them back to the main body of Leopard Warriors. And it was on the back-trek that Tarzan saw them from his vantage point in the trees.

Usually he was little concerned with the fate of such men, most of whom he rated lower than the beasts. He resolved, however, to help these two—for the satisfaction of harrying the hated Leopard Men. But could he win them from these steel-taloned creatures?

So Says Mr. McCollum—

It's Constitutional, I'll Admit That—

IF YOU want to go on worrying about your financial problems, getting old before your time—there's no law against it—

BUT—You'd feel a whole lot better, and you'd live a lot longer—if you had no money worries. Why not clear up all those scattered obligations and arrange to have just one place to pay?

I'LL let you have the cash you need—$60 to $1,000—at interest less than 1 per cent per month per annum—and you can take from ONE TO TWO YEARS to repay. See me at the Seaboard Loan and Savings Co., 12 Pryor St., S. W.

STETTLER NEW THEORY OF SLAYING DISCARDED

Police Cling To Belief Chauffeur Murdered Los Angeles Couple.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Police said today an exhaustive investigation repudiated the story of Fred Stettler, 25, that a used car dealer might have been responsible for the "murder by the clock" of an aged couple which Stettler at first confessed.

Detective Lieutenant Miles Ledbetter announced that the dealer, Edward Lentz, 46, had given a careful account of his activities last Wednesday night when the crimes were committed.

Police cling to the belief that Stettler killed the couple because he needed money. He confessed to Detective Captain Burt Wallis that he fatally beat Mr. and Mrs. Carl Barbour, boarding house managers, with a hammer, strangled the parrot guarding their money box, then set up a device attached to a watch which later automatically turned on an electric heater, wrapped with kerosene-soaked papers. It was placed under the bed beneath the Barbours.

Lentz was sought when Stettler retracted his confession. Lentz told Ledbetter he met Stettler for the first time a month ago when the youth bought a used car from him. He had seen him on another occasion, he said, when Stettler asked him to appraise another car for purchase.

Lentz outlined to police his activities on Wednesday night. Mrs. Grace Faylor, employe at his car lot, Mrs. Louise Huff, his business associate, and Mr. and Mrs. Nick Redka, at whose home he lives, affirmed his story.

The body of the elderly couple were found in their burning room, skulls battered.

'ANGEL OF BROADWAY' UNDER POLICE GUARD

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Police were assigned tonight to guard the home of Rheba Crawford Splivalo, former "Angel of Broadway" and militant assistant pastor of Aimee Semple McPherson's Angelus Temple, after she reported receiving "underworld threats."

Miss Crawford, in a secret conference with Chief of Detectives Joseph Taylor, said she had received a "frantic" telephone call Thursday night, warning her to leave her house.

"There is someone coming to your house to kill you," the unnamed informant said. "Please get out."

ANGEL OF BROADWAY KNOWN IN ATLANTA.

Mrs. Splivalo was widely known in Atlanta a number of years ago when she was a Salvation Army "lassie." She went from Atlanta to New York to carry on her Salvation Army work.

AUTOMATIC BALLOON GOES 133,000 FEET UP

KIEV, U. S. S. R., Feb. 23.—(AP) An automatic radio balloon without passengers reached what was described as a record height of 40,000 meters (about 133,000 feet) today.

The Borispol aerological observatory, which made the test, announced that instruments in the balloon showed that air pressure at that altitude was only 1-500th of the pressure near the ground.

Bodies of 3 Victims Recovered From Snow Slide on West Coast

100 Winter Sports Followers Marooned on Cascade Summit in Washington; Many Escape Avalanche; Autos and Trucks Uncovered.

SEATTLE, Feb. 23. — (AP) — The Snoqualmie Pass snow slide, which killed at least three men, was dug into today by workers to ascertain if more persons remained trapped. Three bodies were recovered.

Menacing snow fields of the Cascade mountains, 65 miles west of here, hung above the workmen as they toiled with snow plows and shovels from opposite ends of the barrier, spread over half a mile of road. Several automobiles and trucks were uncovered, all unoccupied.

The digging continued because, Coroner Otto N. Mittelstadt, of King county, felt by no means certain the casualty list of three dead and one injured represented the total.

Recurring slides last night retarded the crews' progress. In the darkness they were fearful their own digging might start another avalanche.

About 100 winter sports followers were marooned at the Cascade summit because of slides. They took refuge in resorts, club buildings and private lodges. Many were caught in the avalanche yesterday but escaped unhurt.

The body of Len Litchy, 35, Zillah, Wash., was dug from 30 feet of snow. The bodies of Edwin J. Miller, 23, Redmond, Wash., and William Gill, 23, Bothel, Wash., were found in the crushed cab of their truck.

Harold Devereaux, Yakima truck driver, was recovering in an Ellensburg hospital, from a fractured rib and exposure. He was buried in nine feet of snow for several hours. Dodging beneath a fender of his truck when he heard the avalanche coming, he escaped its full force.

ROCK CRASHES HOME, KILLING SMALL CHILD

ST. JOHN'S, Newfoundland, Feb. 23.—(AP)—A huge boulder, loosened by 30 hours of rain, crashed down a hillside and through a home here today, killing one child and seriously injuring another.

Two hours after the tragedy police and volunteers found the body of 4-year-old Theresa Byrne beneath a mass of debris in the water-filled basement.

Her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Byrne, bailing water from the basement when the boulder went through the floor above, were uninjured.

The mother found her son, Robert, 7, seriously hurt. He was buried face downward in a pile of dirty and splintered wood.

An older child, Lillian, escaped injury. She was eating breakfast in the kitchen while her sister and brother played in an adjoining room.

The boulder was started on its destructive path by a landslide which undermined it from its perch. It stopped on a main road north of the Byrne home.

A mass of dirt, following in its wake, poured through the hole.

Theresa, sitting on a little stool, went plunging to the basement. Apparently she was killed instantly.

Rocket Plane Travels 250 Feet In New York-Jersey Test Flight

GREENWOOD LAKE, N. Y., Feb. 23.—(AP)—A 12-foot rocket plane covered approximately 250 feet today in what its sponsor, Fred Kessler, called the first successful flight of its kind.

Spouting flames, the duraluminum plane shot from a catapult for a distance of 40 feet, dropped onto the ice-covered lake, and then rose again before it "nose-dived" into a huge mound of ice and snow.

The plane, with a 15-foot wing spread, reached a maximum altitude of 40 feet.

In its flight the plane crossed the state line between New York and New Jersey. The starting point was 60 feet from the border, on the New York side.

Aboard the plane was a packet of 6,149 letters, bearing special stamps, addressed to the postmaster of Hewitt, N. J., just across the lake.

The craft was shot from a platform at a 23-degree angle.

As mechanics started the motor, an 800-pound weight suspended from the front end of the incline was released, the combined action catapulting the plane into the air.

"This is the first successful flight of its kind ever made," Kessler said. "My critics would say that it was the catapult that kept the plane going.

"But it was shown that after it dropped on the lake, the plane moved away under its own power, showing that it can fly by itself."

He said that the flight showed the feasibility of transporting mail by rocket plane.

Among the spectators was Carl P. Graddick, federal air mail official, who said he was not attending in an official capacity.

'HUMAN BOMB' TO FACE CHARGE ON WEST COAST

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Police announced today that a complaint of "malicious use of dynamite" will be lodged tomorrow in justice court at Bell, a suburb, against Joe Gabriele, 76, in a "human bomb" case.

Gabriele, a laborer who said he came from Italy 30 years ago, was jailed yesterday after his arrest in the yard of the home of Frank Aloi, store owner and his long-time friend. He carried strapped around his waist what police reported was a homemade bomb.

Aloi said he received threatening letters recently, written in Italian, after a dispute arose between him and Gabriele over money.

INDUSTRIAL REACTION TO NRA IS DISCLOSED

Report Shows 1,750 Firms Scrapped Reforms After Act Was Ruled Dead.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 23.—(UP)—Nearly half of 3,500 firms holding government contracts scrapped NRA minimum wage and maximum hour reforms as soon as the United States supreme court beheaded the blue eagle, a confidential survey by federal authorities showed tonight.

The inquiry was made by the contracts division of the government. Officials feel that it represents an accurate cross-section of the attitude industry generally holds toward the New Deal's recovery program and will send the report to President Roosevelt, it was said.

Meantime, tucked away in the private files of Secretary of Commerce Daniel C. Roper is a very hush-hush and mysterious report on details of the manner in which the nation's great basic industries reacted to the passing of NRA. This investigation was made at the request of President Roosevelt soon after the supreme court's decision.

Group Works for Weeks.

A special committee worked for weeks with a large force of NRA field workers checking conditions in thousands of plants. Roper has had the committee's report for more than a month, but has refused to make it public despite pressure from some New Dealers and powerful labor organizations. A movement is afoot to force him to surrender it to one of the congressional labor committees.

One usually reliable official told the United Press the report would show that a vast section of industry, freed of code restrictions, slashed wages 10 per cent and, in many cases, as much as 25 per cent and drastically lengthened the work day. Industries are reported on as a whole and not as individual corporations.

Agents of the contracts division encountered some hostility from private firms in their inquiry, it was shown. Forty-three companies flatly refused to give information concerning their wage and hour schedules.

A total of 1,821 or 51.92 per cent of the 3,500 companies maintained code wages while 1,480 or 42.20 per cent reduced pay of their employes. The report showed that 845 or 24 per cent of the firms reduced wages less than 10 per cent while 635 or 18.11 per cent cut salaries 10 per cent or more.

60 Per cent Maintain Hours.

Forecasts by New Dealers that industry generally would force workers to toil longer hours than specified under codes were only partially confirmed. The contracts division report showed that 2,127 or 60 per cent of the firms covered by the inquiry held hours constant.

A total of 1,309 firms or 37 per cent of the companies increased hours. They are not listed by name, it was understood.

Copies of the report, it was learned, will be sent to the house and senate labor committees to emphasize the need of early enactment of the Walsh bill. Introduced by Senator David Walsh, democrat, Massachusetts, this measure provides that companies doing business with the government must comply with restrictions of codes under which they operated before NRA was abandoned.

EX-GOVERNOR RITCHIE DIES AFTER ATTACK

sections, and one by one the governors voiced their dry sentiment. When Ritchie arose to speak, he dropped a bombshell into the meeting.

Prohibition Called "Tyranny."

He told the conference bluntly the people of his state were against prohibition. Before it was enacted, he said, they were solving the temperance problem by local option by which communities desiring prohibition "actually got it."

"The Volstead act," he asserted, "changed all this. Our people in the main regard it as an unnecessary and drastic federal infringement of their state and personal right, foreign to the spirit of the federal union and resulting in a sectional tyranny that the people of my state will not brook."

These bold statements nearly broke up the conference. But his views became the platform of other enemies of the Volstead act, and his prestige increased, slowly at first and then rapidly.

Ten years after the White House conference, he stood on the democratic convention floor in Chicago and helped put a strong repeal plank in the national platform. He wanted to be the party's standard-bearer in the campaign but the nomination went to Roosevelt.

It was no little satisfaction to Ritchie a few months later to see the presidential ticket surge to victory, with the repeal plank he so long had advocated firmly embedded in the platform.

Beaten After Gubernatorial Record.

Unsuccessful in his 1932 bid for the presidential nomination, Ritchie sought a fifth term as governor of Maryland. His defeat by a republican in 1934 was a novel and disappointing experience for him.

It was his first at the polls in a 32-year public career beginning as assistant city solicitor of Baltimore. For 15 years he had been governor—a record for continuous service in the nation.

Ritchie was born in Richmond, Va., August 29, 1876. His mother was Elizabeth Caskie Cabell Ritchie, whose family furnished many men distinguish in public service in Virginia. His father was Judge Albert Ritchie, a native Marylander of distinction.

Young Ritchie, the only child of his parents, was educated in the private schools of Baltimore, at Johns Hopkins University and the University of Maryland law school.

When 31 he married Elizabeth Catherine Baker, of Cantonsville, Md. They were divorced nine years later and Ritchie never remarried. They had no children.

WALKER BENNETT DIES IN NASHVILLE

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Feb. 23.—(AP) Walker Marion Bennett, 97, oldest living member of Sigma Alpha Epsilon social fraternity and a Confederate veteran, died here early today at the home of his sister, Mrs. E. B. Barnes.

He attained the rank of captain during the War Between the States, after which he became a school teacher and farmer.

Mr. Bennett joined the S. A. E. fraternity during his school days at Union College, then at Murfreesboro, Tennessee.

He was a native of Sparta Tenn.

GERMANY MAKES BID FOR AIRCRAFT TRADE

SHANGHAI, China, Feb. 23.—(AP) Nazi Germany, battling to recapture her former rich markets in the Far East, is challenging the United States and Italy for the major role in the development of Chinese aviation.

Establishment of an aircraft factory on Chinese soil, using German and Chinese materials, is projected as the newest German move for pre-eminence in China's state-controlled aeronautical field.

The program, if carried out, will enable Germany to expand her market for airplane engines, instruments and other aircraft accessories. The Chinese government is expected to buy the entire output of the factory, reducing its imports of high-priced American and Italian airplanes.

For the past several years the United States and Italy have monopolized the market for airplanes in China. Germany has been a negligible quantity, except in civil aviation. But American aircraft dealers are frankly concerned at the newest German bid, pointing out that the Germans have an advantage in being subsidized by their government.

ADMIRAL BYRD FACES NERVOUS BREAKDOWN

DALLAS, Texas, Feb. 23.—(AP)—Doctors have advised Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, on a national lecture tour, that he is in danger of a nervous breakdown and have suggested he obtain more rest, a relative said here tonight.

Byrd failed to appear today at Oklahoma City, where he was expected.

The relative declined to say where the admiral was, but it was understood he was resting at a country home near Dallas. He said Byrd would fill his lecture engagement in Oklahoma City tomorrow, but that he had decided to curtail his public contacts as much as possible.
